Ickes Himself 'Muscling In,' Smith's Reply In Va. Fight

Uses Secretary's Own Phrase in Reply to 'Interference.'

Dodd Says Charge Disproves Loyalty

Acrimony Aired in Radio Speeches on Eve of Tuesday Voting.

By Edward T. Folliard

Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, struck back at Interior Secretary Ickes last night, charging that he had "muscled in on the Democratic Party and is trying to ruin it."

Smith, whom many New Dealers hope to see "purged" in Tuesday's primary, had been accused by Ickes of "trying to muscle in and ride into office on the PWA coat tails."

William E. Dodd, jr., son of the former Ambassador to Germany, who opposes Smith in the Eighth Virginia District, joined in the acrimonious controversy. Following Smith on the air, Dodd said:

"In view of the statement of the man (Ickes) who by his sheer respect for the honesty and truth has become President Roosevelt's strong right arm, I am wondering how we can reconcile Mr. Smith's attack on the Secretary of the Interior with his professions of friendship for the Administration."

Ickes "Listening In."

At the time Representative Smith was blasting him, Secretary Ickes and his bride were on a train bound for Alaska. Ickes had said before he left that he would listen to the speech by radio.

Representative Smith explained to his WJSV audience that the slang term "muscle in" originated in "the lawless city of Chicago, where the unhappy Harold Ickes is also said to have originated."

"The popular meaning of the term muscle in," said Smith, "is to indicate someone else is trying to get in on the particular private racket of one of the gangster mobs. It must be distressing to millions of decent citizens in America that Harold Ickes should have used this unfortunate term with all its sinister implications.

"Lifetime of Muscling In."

"The unhappy Harold Ickes has been muscling in all his life. He muscled into the Republican Party and helped to ruin that; he deserted the Republican Party and muscled into the Bull Moose Party and helped to ruin that; he deserted that party and muscled in on the Democratic Party and is trying to ruin that.

"He is now attempting to muscle in on a Democratic primary in Virginia in his frantic efforts to destroy the true Democratic Party. Having no party loyalty or political principles himself, he is unable to understand the bitter resentment of lifelong Democrats at his untiring efforts to destroy the real Democratic Party which has given him his only place in the sun during a lifetime of muscling in.

Blames Lewis and C. I. O.

Representative Smith charged that the real source of the opposition to him was John L. Lewis and the C. I. O. He was one of 42 members of Congress, he said, who had been blacklisted and marked for defeat by the C. I. O.

"I am proud to say that I am one of the 42 so blacklisted," Smith said. "The C. I. O. blacklisted me and other prominent members of Congress because they cannot control us and we refuse to take their orders.

"It will be remembered that it was the C. I. O. that originated and carried on the iniquitous and lawless sit down strikes that terrorized and paralyzed business. Almost immediately on the heels of the sitdown strikes, the present business

Soviet Repels Japan's Attack OnBorderHill

Killed, Wounded on Both Sides; Russia Demands Troops Be Punished.

By the Associated Press

Moscow, July 29.—Soviet border troops today repulsed a Japanese-Manchukuo attempt to occupy a strategic hill on what Russia declares is Soviet territory.

There were killed and wounded on both sides.

The Soviet charge d'affaires at Tokyo was instructed to lodge a vigorous protest, demand exemplary punishment of those responsible and warn the Japanese government that Moscow holds it responsible for the consequences.

The clash was near Posiet Bay, in the region where Japan has declared Soviet troops violated the Manchukuo frontier July 11. The hill in question is near the junction of Siberia, Japanese-inspired Manchukuo, and Japanese Korea.

Tass (Russian official news agency) gave this version of the clash:

"At 4:00 p. m., July 29, two Japanese-Manchurian detachments crossed the Soviet frontier north of a hill near Lake Khasan regarding which the Japanese government recently presented unfounded claims and attempted to seize a hill situated two kilometers (1¼ miles) north of the hill in question near Lake Khasan."

Girl Swims Baltic For First Time in 40 Hrs. 2 Minutes

Warnemuende, Germany, July 29 (AP).—After nearly two full days of fighting waves and currents, a 17-year-old Danish girl completed a swim across the Baltic Sea today. She and her backers believed she was the first ever to do it.

The girl, Jenny Kammersgaard, swam from Gedser, southern tip of the Danish island of Falster, to Niegenhagen, near Warnemuende, in 40 hours and two minutes.

The straight-line distance is 28 miles, but curents often took the girl far off her course and she had to swim about 37 miles.

Miss Kammersgaard was accompanied by two Danish boats equipped with a searchlight and a radio. Dance music was played for her.

British House In Recess, May Be Called Back

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, July 29.—Parliament today adjourned until November 1, after arranging for an emergency session if a crucial situation develops in Czechslovakia, Spain or any where else.

Commons authorized the speaker, when requested by the government, to call the House, if he is satisfied that such a course is "necessary in the public interest."

Worn by the most exhausting session since the World War, a session which has set a record for bitter debate on foreign affairs, the 615 members of Commons tonight were dispersing to all parts of England, Scotland, Wales and northern Ireland. Some of them planned to check up for themselves on affairs on the continent.

Many took with them the foreboding that their vacation may be broken up for any one of three reasons:

1. The developing crisis in Czechoslovakia. August and September are regarded in Downing street as the most dangerous months. If the Germans and Czechs are not at war before the end of September, then British forecasters expect peace to last until next spring.

2. The situation in Spain, where Gen. Franco's bombing planes have renewed attack upon British shipping. The attacks once were stopped when the British persuaded Mussolini to use his influence with Franco.

3. The Anglo-Italian accord itself. Prime Minister Chamberlain half promised to call a special session of Parliament if he decides to make the accord operative this summer.

As Parliament was packing up this afternoon the Chamberlain government was criticized by M. P.'s for failure to protect the British ship Dellwyn, which was bombed and sunk at Gandia last Tuesday, while the British destroyer Hero stood by helplessly.

The civil lord of the admiralty, Col. J. J. Llewellin, replied that the navy had been instructed by the government to give full protection to British ships outside territorial waters, but not inside such waters.

Franco Closing Gandesa Trap Upon Loyalist Army of 20,000

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, July 29.—Gen. Franco's insurgents tonight slowly closed a trap on 20,000 loyalist troops, including American and French volunteers, and threatened to wipe out in a bloody slaughter their Catalonian victory 90 miles southwest of Barcelona.

The international brigades and Spanish Communist divisions of the government, stalled for the second day at the gates of strategic Gandesa along Catalonia's western border, were cut off from their bases and comrades in the rear except for two fragile communication lines.

The foreign volunteers and extremist brigades under Gen. Lister, the "stone-breaker," fought stubbornly around the town with their backs to the Ebro River, whose waters rushed to the Mediterranean at flood stage as result of Franco's opening the Tremp hydro-electric dams 80 miles north.

All of the pontoon bridges over which the loyalist crossed the river and drove westward 20 miles to surround Gandesa, insurgent base of operations, were wiped out by the rising waters and as fast as the loyalists rebuilt them insurgent bombing planes blasted them.

Meanwhile, to the north of the 28-mile arc of fighting around Gandesa, Franco's 20,000 reinforcements rushed up from his now halted Valencia offensive in the south moved down the Ebro Valley from Fayon.

Franco hoped to trap the 20,000 loyalists within the 20-mile gap between the Ebro banks and Gandesa, driving them into the surrounding Fatarella and Villalba de Los Arcos Heights.

Vote Drives Near Climax In Tennessee

Gov. Browning Assails Crump, Will Invade Memphis Monday.

Refuses to Say if He Will Call Militia; Stumps in Trailer.

By Sidney Olson.
Post Staff Correspondent.

Nashville, Tenn., July 29.—Like black hawks circling over a sidehill cornfield, the men struggling for control of Tennessee's Democrats wheeled swiftly over the State today and tonight in the final week's drive before the primary polls open August 4.

And because a huge, tawny boar stubbornly spraddled the center of a narrow road, causing a tire blowout on the $3,000 chronium-trimmed trailer of Gov. Gordon Browning, the chief executive consented late this afternoon to an interview even on the touchy question:

"Are you going to call out the National Guard when you enter Memphis Monday night?"

"I ain't showing my hand yet," said the tall, black-eyed, black-haired Governor, who is fighting for his political life against the powerful Memphis machine of "Boss Ed" Crump and Senator Kenneth D. McKellar.

"It depends on conditions. Either the Guard will be there or they won't be there. But I'll be there, and so will Crump's heelers, and so will the honest citizens of Shelby County.

"I'm Going to Win."

"I'm going to win this election and set up a clean State-wide organization. Then we're going to get McKellar, when he comes up in 1940. The whole country would be relieved if we could get the Nation's No. 1 spoilsman out of Washington."

Asked if he planned running against McKellar for the Senate seat in 1940, Browning shrugged, saying:

"Whatever man can beat him the most will be picked to run."

The boar finally shooed off the road by muttering State highway patrolmen, and the wheel changed, Browning turned to go, but swung back and added:

"Watch Berry (Senator George L. Berry, up for re-election). He's gaining every day. He's a long ways back, but at the rate he's going he may tip it yet. And notice that the Crump-McKellar crowd never knock him. I wouldn't even be surprised if they dropped Tom Stewart overboard at this late date and swung behind Berry."

3 Fliers Killed In 2 Navy, Marine Plane Accidents

By the United Press.

San Diego, Calif., July 29.—Two Navy fliers were killed and one escaped in a parachute today when a Navy torpedo plane crashed in the harbor here.

Pilot J. O. Rose and Radioman J. P. Pfieffer were killed. Aviation Cadet J. A. Porter bailed out.

The plane was attached to Squadron 3, and was on a routine training flight when "it encountered mechanical difficulties."

Varina, N. C., July 29 (AP).—A Marine Corps airplane crashed here today, killing Sergt. Ernest S. Bowker, of Chicago one of its two occupants. The pilot, Aviation Cadet Jens C. Aggerbeck, of Northfield, Minn., made a successful parachute leap and escaped unhurt.

The plane, one of a squadron bound from Quantico, Va., to Parris Island, S. C., to participate in gunnery practice, plunged into a tobacco field at the edge of this town.

Argentina Raises Immigration Bars

Buenos Aires, July 29 (AP).—Argentina has decreed new barriers against foreigners to assure selective immigration, preferably of farmers with enough resources to establish themselves.

A decree, effective October 1, issued yesterday, was understood to have been drawn because of the great number of central Europeans desiring to enter Argentina and to prevent an influx of emigres who would work for low wages.

Under the new plan, applications to emigrate to Argentina must be sent by consuls abroad to an immigration board here composed of representatives of the ministries of interior, foreign affairs and agriculture.

AFL Charges 'Bias,' Defies Labor Board

Proclaims Refusal to Obey Ruling Voiding Closed Shop.

Angry Action Follows Decision Favoring C.I.O. in Indiana.

Defiance of a National Labor Relations Board order by workmen affiliated with the American Federation of Labor was proclaimed yesterday after the board had voided another closed shop contract obtained by an A. F. L. union and ordered the company involved to bargain with the rival Committee for Industrial Organization.

Terming "insufferable" the situation created by a series of board decisions favorable to the C. I. O. in the struggle of the two labor giants for supremacy, federation officials said the "biased position of the board" could not be tolerated.

"One should not be amazed if in such a situation the order of the board will not be respected by employes whose guaranteed rights are trampled upon through biased decrees, thus encouraging war between the board and free American workers.".

Board Loses Three Cases.

He added:

"There are some rights which workers legally possess, and these rights are paramount to the edicts of the National Labor Relations Board. The American worker is not yet prepared to submit to 'enslavement' by bureaucratic decree."

Meanwhile, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans returned three decisions against the Labor Board, decisions that Padway termed "a bright spot in a gloomy day."

The Peninsular and Occidental Steamship Co. was sustained in an appeal from a board order to reinstate 145 C. I. O. members of two crews for a sit-down strike in the interest of the C. I. O. union when the company had a contract with the A. F. L. A board order that the Bell Oil and Gas Co., Tulsa, Okla., reinstate three C. I. O. workers was set aside, as was a citation for contempt against the Bell Oil and Gas, Burk-Divide, Consolidated and Reno Oil Cos.

Padway's angry statement followed an NLRB ruling that the Serrick Corporation of Muncie, Ind., an auto parts company, had helped the A. F. L. International Association of Machinists to organize skilled tool-

Dublin Crowds Cheer Corrigan On His Farewell

Dublin, July 29 (AP).—Douglas G. (East Is West) Corrigan bade farewell to thousands of his Irish admirers tonight and took a train for Cobh, where he will board the New York-bound United States liner Manhattan.

"Good by and don't take the wrong turn," Lord Mayor "Alfie" Byrne sang out to the young American aviator, who landed here July 18 after a surprise flight from New York.

"You can take a wrong turn and still get to the right place," Corrigan yelled to the big crowd which gathered to see him off.

Rail Blast Kills Two in Mexico; Cedillo Blamed

Mexico City, July 29 (AP).—A Mexican army lieutenant and an infant were killed today in a San Luis Potosi state train explosion railway officials blamed on Cedillo rebels.

The explosion occurred within a mile of the spot where followers of Gen. Cedillo, who launched an unsuccessful revolt May 20, dynamited another train two months ago.

Filipino Reports He Heard Plane Flying Over Luhuy Island on Regular Course; 2 Capital Scientists Were Aboard

By the Associated Press.

Manila (Saturday), July 30.—Air and surface craft scanned the typhoon cradle of the Pacific in vain today for traces of the 26-ton Hawaii Clipper, which vanished yesterday with 15 persons in the ocean stretches approximately 565 miles east of here.

Army and Navy searching forces coursed back and forth over the water where the huge flying boat mysteriously disappeared, paused briefly to report failures, and then doggedly resumed the hunt.

The Army transport Meigs, which was but 87 miles from the clipper's last reported position, spent all night zig-zagging across the plane's course, splitting the night blackness with searchlights and sending up signal flares. She continued the search by daylight.

Six heavy Army bombers soared out over the area in excellent weather conditions, but after hours of flying they messaged:

"Found nothing."

The Pan American transpacific plane last reported at 11:09 p. m. (E. S. T.) Thursday, saying she was 565 miles east of Manila on a regular flight here from Guam.

Hogan to Pick Body to Uphold Bill of Rights

Fears 'Complete Change in Our Form of Government.'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, July 29.—The American Bar Association acted today to assure "the assistance of competent lawyers for the defense and protection" of any citizen denied or threatened with denial of the rights and immunities guaranteed by the Bill of Rights of the Constitution.

Within less than hour after Frank J. Hogan, of Washington, D. C., incoming president of the association, asked the convention in its final session to authorize appointment of a "committee on defense of liberties vouchsafed by the Bill of Rights," the association's ruling body, the house of delegates, authorized Hogan to name a committee of nine members. Hogan indicated he would appoint the committee within 10 days.

Other officers who took over for the coming year today in addition to President Hogan included Thomas B. Gay, of Richmond, Va., who succeeded George M. Morris, of Washington, as president of the house; John H. Voorhees, of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., and Harry S. Knight, of Sunbury, Pa., both of whom were

Assembly Set To Bar Earle Graft Inquiry

Senate Leaders Send Out for Two Legislators to Pass Bills.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 29.—Pennsylvania's Democratic administration set itself tonight to give the final legislative push to bills that would offset a grand jury investigation of charges against Gov. George H. Earle and 13 other State officials and party executives.

Senate leaders were confident they had the votes to approve the measures finally in a midnight session, but they sent out calls for two absent legislators.

The normal political division is 33 Democrats to 16 Republicans, but in the second-reading vote on the bills late today four Democrats lined up with the solid Republican opposition. The dissenters decried the administration's "unseemly haste."

The after-midnight session begins a new legislative day and, with final Senate approval, the bills can be sent immediately to the predominantly Democratic House for sanction of minor amendments. Then the measures would be ready for the Governor's signature in record time. The Legislature convened only last Monday night.

The grand jury's inquiry into the Storm Floods District Areas; Lightning Fires Two Houses

Swept out of the northwest on a 39-mile-an-hour gale, a violent rainstorm yesterday uprooted trees, flooded low-lying sections of the city, put electric power out of service and fired at least two houses by lightning.

Electric lights were extinguished in several sections of Alexandria, traffic lights on several Washington streets were snarled and live wires were reported down. Construction work along K street and in the downtown area was flooded or washed out, and cellars in private homes were reported filled with water.

A bolt of lightning struck the home of Ralph M. Hardy, 337 Windsor lane, Bethesda, Md., and ignited the roof and second story of the home. Hardy estimated the damage at $700. Members of the Bethesda Fire Department said lightning apparently struck the house by way of the radio aerial.

An unoccupied house at Maryland Park, Md., near Capital Heights, was set ablaze when it was struck by lightning, which rippled into the attic and blasted a nearby tree. The fire was extinguished by Gilbert R. White, who lives near the house, to have been occupied today.

A bolt of lightning shattered a tree on the White House grounds at the height of the storm, tearing away a limb and strips of bark. The tree stands on the east side of the grounds near Pennsylvania avenue.

Steel Chiefs Force Clergy To Fight CIO, Says Pastor

Youngstown Sheet-Tube Applied 'Pressure,' Inquiry Told.

Church Accused Of Helping Reds

By the Associated Press

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee was told yesterday that William B. Gillies, vice president of Youngstown Sheet and Tube, assembled the ministers of Youngstown at dinner one evening back in 1936, delivered a fiery speech against the C. I. O., and "practically commanded" them to keep their church members from joining the union.

The committee's witness was the Rev. Mr. Orville C. Jones, young clergyman. Seated nervously beside Gillies, he asserted that "the subtle power of the steel companies was such that they (the ministers) wouldn't dare to take an independent stand."

He himself did take such a stand, he related, with the result that "pressure" was brought to bear upon him and in the end the "antagonism" of the steel people was such that he felt it would be better for the church if he resigned. He did so, and is now located in Cleveland.

"Subtle Pressure."

"It was a matter of subtle pressure all the time," Jones said, "because the steel workers are not paid enough to support a church of their own and the churches have to depend on the officials of the steel mills for financial support. It's perfectly natural and simple, and yet it amounts to an effective coercion that the ministers of the city do not dare express an independent judgment."

Chairman La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, turned to Gillies for his version of the story. The steel man looked glaringly at the minister and then said his account of the speech made at the banquet was substantially correct. But, Gillies added:

"It would be far below me to exert any pressure."

Throughout the C. I. O. organizing period, he said, the "threat of a strike was uppermost." His address to the ministers, he added, emphasized the need for peace. As to statements by Jones that people resigned from his church, among them Frank Purnell, president of Sheet and Tube, Gillies said:

"If they don't like the reverend's remarks that was up to them, but there was no company pressure."

"Meeting Place for Reds."

Purnell said his father "dug the cellar of that church with his own hands," and he had a deep family attachment for it.

"The church was used by this gentleman," he said indicating Jones, "as a meeting place for known Reds. I never said anything to anyone. All I did was to resign from the church. I resigned long before the time he is talking about."

He complained to Chairman La Follette that "the civil liberties of a man to get out of a church" were being questioned, and the chairman replied that that was not the case. When Purnell asserted that an erroneous impression was being given the country, La Follette said the committee had done nothing but assemble the facts.

"I had nothing to do with anybody else resigning from the church," Purnell said.

"Advised By Foreman."

"Did you continue to contribute to the church after you resigned?" asked La Follette.

"Not immediately," Purnell answered.

"Was it after Mr. Jones had left?"

"Yes," replied Purnell.

$1,038,000 Granted but Is Not Enough for Need, Officials Declare.

Elated as they were over allotment yesterday of $1,038,000 of PWA funds for school construction, officials last night said much more would be needed to relieve completely existing congestion.

At the same time yesterday the National Institute of Health was allotted $1,517,000 for two laboratory buildings and eight sets of double quarters for 18 medical officers at Bethesda, Md.

The school funds made available yesterday will provide for additions to seven elementary buildings and replacement of an eighth.

"We are grateful for receiving this money," said Dr. Chester W. Holmes, acting superintendent of schools. "It will help relieve the congestion considerably. However, we hope that this allotment is just the forerunner of others to come on the program the Board of Education submitted. We need the others to relieve completely the congestion."

New Schools Listed.

The board had asked for $3,814,375 for 16 new school buildings. The requests were in line with its five-year building program.

Officials said that construction of an eight-room addition to the Kingsman School, Fourteenth and E streets northeast, would alleviate congestion in the sixth division. The building estimated to cost $218,500 is expected to allow abandonment of the Pierce School, Fourteenth and G streets northeast, and also relieve congestion at the Edmunds, Maury and Webb Schools.

Construction of a new eight-room Bunker Hill School, Michigan avenue near Twelfth street northeast, at an estimated cost of $209,000 will relieve congestion in the fifth division. It will replace a two-room obsolete structure. The Board of Education has urged its replacement for several years.

Big Colored Project.

Assembly hall gymnasiums which officials said would greatly relieve congestion will be included in a two-story and basement addition to the Bancroft School, Newton street and Ingleside terrace northwest, and the one story and basement addition to Whittier School, Fifth and Sheridan streets northwest.

Biggest project for colored schools will be a $185,000 10-room and gymnasium addition to the M. M. Washington Vocational School. Officials said that expansion of vocational program will bring about an increased enrollment at the school, necessitating the enlargement.

A large increase in colored population in the Capitol and Marshall Heights areas makes the eight-room and assembly hall-gymnasium addition to the Smothers School necessary. The project will cost an estimated $168,000.

A two-story and basement addition will also be made to the Giddings School, and a two-story addition to the Monroe School.

School officials had drawn up a five-year building program for replacing of obsolete schools amounting to $30,000,000. Most urgent items for replacement of old and partly condemned schools were included in the requests which they submitted to the District Commissioners for transmission to the PWA. It was expected that construction would start soon on all projects.

Congress Cut Figure.

For the 1939 fiscal year budget school officials had asked for more than $4,500,000 for new school construction, but Congress slashed the figure to $1,568,650.

The allotment yesterday was for the direct grant of $467,000 and loan of $571,000. It came one day after the District had been alloted $2,093,625 for four other projects, and a week after allotment of $2,800,000 for three projects.

This brought the total amount loaned or granted so far to $5,931,625. Of this the District was granted $2,668,625. It was loaned $3,263,000 to be repaid in 25 years.

The allotment for the National Institute of Health will expand the health research center being developed on the Bethesda site donated by Mr. and Mrs. Luke I. Wilson.

Already under construction are an administration building, industrial hygiene and animal buildings. Construction of the new laboratories will permit evacuation of present cramped laboratories at Twenty-fifth and E streets northwest.

The allotment was part of a total of $3,200,000 granted to the United States Public Health Service which included $160,000 for construction and equipment of officers' quarters and extension of hospitals and facilities to provide a cancer treatment center at the Marine Hospital in Baltimore, Md.

Headquarters of the National Cancer Institute, for cancer research, will be located on the Rockville site also.

Wells Sherman To Retire From Agriculture Dept.

Wells A. Sherman, Agriculture Department authority on fruit and vegetable marketing, will retire August 1 after 43 years in the service.

WELLS A. SHERMAN.

He entered the bureau in 1895 in the original Division of Statistics. During the last 18 years he has been in charge of fruit and vegetable marketing and regulatory work under the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Sherman is largely responsible for establishment of the market news service. In 1918, he was in charge of the collection of excess profits made in wool under war regulations. The Division of Fruits and Vegetables was established under his direction in 1920.

Sherman has administered the produce agency act (1927), standard container act (1928), perishable agricultural commodities act (1930) and export apple and pear act (1933).

He is a native of Ash Grove, McLean, Va., and will make his home there after retirement.

Bocock Praises PWA's Work For Gallinger

By Gerald G. Gross

Thanks to the Public Works Administration, Gallinger Hospital seems destined to take its place in the front rank of municipal hospitals, not only as a diagnostic and treatment center but as an educational institution, Supt. Edgar A. Bocock said yesterday.

Gratified by the recent PWA allotments for a 300-bed medical building, 20-bed tuberculosis ward and an addition to the nurses' home, Dr. Bocock envisaged a "happy ending" beyond all expectations to climax the sad narrative of the last few years—overcrowding, mingling of diseased patients with convalescents, use of firetrap buildings and lack of equipment.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, and Dr. D. L. Seckinger, coordinator of health and hospitals, were equally enthusiastic yesterday when asked to comment on the PWA expansion program, but they wished to say nothing which might jeopardize Gallinger projects still pending.

Praises Press.

"The additions which have been approved," said Dr. Bocock, "will make possible a highly satisfactory grade of medical education work. They will enable this institution to offer a vastly improved brand of service to patients without continued overcrowding, with due regard for segregation of communicable diseases, with improved physical surroundings and a general advancement in the accommodation of citizens which, in the past, has been defective to a striking degree in some instances."

He voiced the opinion that the Washington press, by constructive criticism of conditions at Gallinger, played an important part in obtaining the relief which has been granted by PWA.

In stories and pictures The Post, in February, 1936, pointed out the deplorable conditions of housing, service and equipment which prevailed at the institution. Again on November 23, 1937, and on succeeding days The Post focused attention on the problem.

At the present time the medical-surgical, or main, building can comfortably accommodate 257 patients. This structure will be used exclusively for surgery, obstetrics and gynecology when the new medical ward is completed. Tuberculosis patients are now housed in antiquated frame structures, which have been condemned on numerous occasions.

Depending upon action taken on pending requests for a new 150-bed children's ward—juvenile patients are being housed temporarily in the administration wing of the psychopathic ward—the new Gallinger Hospital will be a 1,300 to 1,500-bed institution when it is completed.

The daily census is averaging about 850 this month. Summer is the "off season," maximum occupancy occurring in the winter.

Steel Company Made Clergy Attack C.I.O., Pastor Asserts

asked and was granted permission to state for the record that the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. paid wages equal to those paid by the United States Steel subsidiaries which operate under contracts with the C. I. O. The company always has paid such wages, he declared, and added that the United States Steel Corporation's prices and wages determined prices and wages maintained by Sheet & Tube, one of the leading independent steel producers.

At one point Jones testified that after he had addressed a steel workers' union meeting, the chairman of his church finance committee—an official of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Co.—had come to him and warned that "if I ever addressed another union meeting, either he or I would have to leave."

The minister said that when a church representative was sent to the home of a member connected with the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. to find out why he had withdrawn from the church, he was told the man's foreman had advised it.

The minister said he spoke at Gillies' dinner against the churches taking any stand, that "things would be better off" if the workmen were organized and could "sit down with the steel officials on equal terms and talk over the situation."

Denied Spy Charge.

He and Gillies engaged in a controversy at the meeting, he added, over his expressed belief the steel companies were gripped with a "fear psychology." This was in the period preceding the "little steel" strike of 1937.

"Then I asked him, if that were true, why the company employed labor spies. He said the company did not employ any spies. When I said that I believed the situation could be worked out if the men were organized, Mr. Gillies replied that he thought he knew better than I did, after 30 years in the steel business, what was good for these fellows."

Geoffrey Burke, a Youngstown coal dealer, testified that Gillies made much the same speech before a meeting of the Coal Dealers Association.

Because he favored the C. I. O., he said, his coal business had dropped 2,000 tons a year and a campaign of slander had been conducted against him.

Used Labor Spies.

In other testimony, James M. Woltz, supervisor of Sheet & Tube Co.'s police, first denied and then acknowledged that the company had used labor spies and that he had exchanged information thus obtained with James L. Williams, superintendent of company police for Republic Steel Corporation.

Earlier, both Purnell and Gillies had testified that the use of labor spies was contrary to company policies and had been banned since shortly after the World War.

La Follette read into the record a letter from former Justice John H. Clarke of the Supreme Court, now living at San Diego, Calif., to the Youngstown Sheet and Tube during the "little steel" strike. The letter said the firm's reasons for refusing to sign a contract with its employes were "inadequate and unsound."

The jurist, describing himself as a small stockholder in the company, made known his views in a letter to H. G. Daltotn, chairman of the company's board of directors.

Clarke Wrote:

"The difference which has resulted in the shocking strike now in progress seems to narrow down to a question of personal pride or aversion on the part of the parties concerned to sit down at a table and talk the subject out as equals—as will certainly be necessary before settlement is reached."

"Our Best Judgement."

Replying, Dalton said the company's refusal to sign the contract with the union was partly due to its belief that the C. I. O. desired such recognition to enable it to "persuade our employes themselves to its (the C. I. O's) disciplinary lines."

"Our best judgement is that our employes do not desire to be thus controlled and obliged to continue to contribute to the C. I. O. whether they approve of it and find it useful or not," Dalton wrote.

The exchange of letters between Dalton and Clarke occurred in June, 1937.

When the 1937 strike began, Purnell said, the company had an arsenal of $10,000 worth of tear gas, eight machine guns, 452 revolvers, 314 pistols and 190 shotguns. He explained the tear gas was left over from preparations in 1934 for a strike which did not materialize.

Employed Undercover Men.

The company employed some undercover men inside its plants to prevent sabotage, Company Police Head Woltz said. He named George Gransi and Steve Paig as two such workers. He denied he had employed any men for such work in 1936 or 1937.

La Follette put into the record a statement showing the company had paid out $355,879 from 1933 to 1937 to various types of associations, including trade groups, community chests, hospitals and chambers of commerce.

Of the total amount $109,644 went to the Iron and Steel Institute; $15,000 to National Association of Manufacturers; $32,805 to Mahoning Valley Industrial Council; $5,500 to Ohio Manufacturers Association, and $3,477 to Trumbull County Manufacturers Association.

Candidate in Michigan Would Annex Canada

Mount Clemens, Mich., July 29 (AP).—Annexation of Canada by the United States through a plebiscite in both countries was advocated today by Buddie Miller, of Mount Clements, candidate for the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Seventh Michigan District. Miller also favors development of Liberia for colored colonists.

Malice Denied In Land Sale At Hyde Park

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Highland, N. Y., July 29.—Howland Spencer, who sold his 500-acre estate, directly across the Hudson River from President Roosevelt's Hyde Park property, to followers of father Major J. Divine, colored preacher, yesterday, averred today it was done without malice and with no thought of controversy with the President as to whether the name Krum Elbow applied to the Roosevelt estate or the Spencer estate.

Spencer has been afflicted with the gout during the ten days the deal has been in the making, but he has not permitted his suffering to influence his decision. With cool deliberation, he decided upon the sale—from which, he says, he will not realize a penny's profit—simply as an economic experiment.

Testing Two Theories.

"My sole reason for making this deal," Spencer explained, "is to test the theories of Roosevelt against those of Father Divine. Roosevelt is ruining the country with debts. Divine won't permit debts. Roosevelt discriminates against people who want to work. Father Divine makes his people work. I just want to see what will happen when the two systems are tried out in farming this land and the land across the river."

Fther Divine, who called on Spencer three times yesterday and several other times during the negotiations, although his name does not appear on the deed of transfer, gave Spencer to understand the economic experiment would get under way almost immediately.

"They tell me," said Spencer, "that the estate will be populated in ten days by more than 3,000 Divine followers and that they will start working on improvements which will cost more than $150,000."

If 3,000 colored people settle on the 500 acres of Krum Elbow, its population will be approximately twice that of Highland, the nearest village. Residents of Highland are more or less apathetic about it, however. The estate lies two miles from the village.

Spencer, who is an importer and a gentleman-farmer with a long and erstwhile rather intimate acquaintance with the Roosevelt family, said he hadn't heard yet just what the effect of his sale was on the Franklin Roosevelts, whose estate lies just 1,800 feet of water away.

"The only thing I've heard, directly or indirectly, from that side of the river," said Spencer, "is what one of the newspaper reporters told men. The reporter said that Mrs. Roosevelt had given an earful about me at the railroad station in Poughkeepsie. That doesn't bother me for, to Mrs. Roosevelt, I have been, for some time, 'that nasty man.'"

Spencer is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, class of 1911, a member of the Sons of the American Revolution and has been married three times. He served with the British army in the World War and described his post as "political officer for the Adriatic."

Berry, Barkley Told to Speed Fund Reports

Pressure on Candidates in 6 States; 'Gag' Charged in Tennessee.

By William V. Nessly.

The uproarious Democratic senatorial primary campaign in Tennessee produced another charge yesterday—of an alleged attempted radio "gag" on some candidates—as the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee put pressure on candidates in next week's elections to file expenditures statements at once.

Among 46 Senate candidates whose statements are overdue are Senator Berry (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, the Senate leader actively supported by President Roosevelt.

Fresh telegrams were ordered sent late yesterday to candidates in next week's six primary elections who have not replied to the committee's questionaire. Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, said the committee insisted on the data being field before the elections "so the people will be acquainted with the expenditures of funds by their candidates before they vote."

For Tightening Laws.

He indicated, also, that the committee would recommend passage of legislation giving the Senate Investigating Committee greater authority to ascertain actual expenditures on behalf of Senate candidates.

He indicated the committee was dissatisfied with its limited authority to learn all of the expenditures made on behalf of the candidates by friends and associates.

The attempted radio "gag" was charged by John R. Neal, one of the Senate candidates whose original charges brought an investigation and a denunciation by the committee of the "schemes" and "questionable devices" that it said were "in full swing" in the Tennessee campaign.

"Proof by Airmail."

Leading senatorial candidates there are Senator Berry, backed by the State organization of Gov. Gordon Browning, and Tom Stewart, candidate of Ed Crump, Memphis leader, and of Senator Kenneth McKellar.

Neal wired the committee:

"Ranking Federal official has endeavored to close various radio stations to senatorial candidates and others whom he suspects would criticize the Memphis situation. As committee is aware of Federal licensing of radio, this highhanded attempt to throttle an important modern channel of free speech during a heated senatorial campaign in my opinion brings this action under jurisdiction of the committee. Proof of charges forwarded by air mail."

Sheppard said the charge would be given to some of the investigators now in Tennessee for the committee. The committee itself will meet again Tuesday to consider further reports on the Tennessee, Kentucky and other campaigns.

Four States Vote Tuesday.

Primary elections are slated Tuesday in Kansas, Missouri, Virginia and West Virginia; Thursday in Tennessee and Saturday, August 6, in Kentucky.

Missouri candidates who were prodded by the committee yesterday to hasten their questionnaire replies are Senator Bennett Champ Clark, Longstreet Cleveland, Joseph T. Davis and Robert I. Young, all Democrats.

Kansans who have not reported are the Rev. Gerald B. Winrod, Jess Fisher and Dallas W. Knapp, Republicans, and Joe Donher, Democrat.

Meanwhile, Senator McAdoo (Democrat), of California, also running with Roosevelt support, wired the committee a denial of charges that Federal jobholders in California were being "shaken down" for 5 per cent of their pay to aid his campaign fund.

McAdoo Charges Libel.

"These statements emanate from desperate men, who do not hesitate to resort to slander and libel to gain their ends," McAdoo wired. "When my campaign began, I sent a letter to my campaign manager in Los Angeles and to my campaign manager in San Francisco, directing them not to solicit or permit solicitation in my behalf of contributions from Federal employes. Sternly disapproving as I do these practices, I said that I would prefer defeat without such contributions to victory with them."

He expressed belief "that my wishes have been scrupulously regarded by my campaign managers," and called for a committee investigation of "the sources from which all other Senatorial candidates are drawing their campaign funds.

He sent copies of the letters he had sent to his campaign managers forbidding soliciting of jobholders for funds.

The "shake down" charge was made by James W. Mellen, another candidate in California.

Mellen reported to the committee yesterday that he had received campaign contributions of $1,650 and had expended approximately $1,300.

The top expenditure reported was the $15,684.63 listed by Robert A. Taft, Republican Senate candidate in Ohio. Walter F. Bossert (Republican), Indiana, reported no contributions, and expenditures of $5,092.32; Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, spent $2,133.73, and had no contribtuions, and Senator Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, received $1,513.90, and has spent only $236.

Prior to Taft's statement, the largest expenditure report had come from Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who received contributions of $9,416 and spent $12,986.52 in his successful fight for renomination.

Memphis Invasion Set by Browning

Olson

Berry's office, while Prentice Cooper, a slim, smallish and handsome young lawyer, is the Crump candidate for Browning's job.

Browning then climbed aboard the trailer and sank with a sigh into one of the luxurious overstuffed leather chairs inside and the entourage roared and shrieked for Hohenwald.

Battle for Survival.

Citizens in this rootin' tootin' straight shootin' disputin' State are being treated to one of the hottest Tennessee primary fights in a century's history of bitter poll battles. They are watching a battle of giants for survival, with no holds barred, no tricks untried, and the oratory flowing like molten lava.

Given up by the "wise money," Browning hasn't given up. Instead he has doubled and redoubled his efforts to reach and charm every possible voting citizen of the State before next Thursday.

His itinerary is almost incredibly strenuous. Today he made eight speeches in a 200-mile circle—heavy, tiring 45-minute addresses, in each of which he reviewed his platform in full, told hill billy jokes, slammed his opponents, and then shook hands with everybody in sight. Tonight his trailer is whipping over the rain-slicked new Black Top Mountain roads in an effort to overtake a train outside of Nashville.

On the train he will sleep four hours, he said, before resuming the battle tomorrow in the deepest reaches of Republican East Tennessee, at Mountain City, which is about 700 miles from Nashville by road, due to the interminably curving highways. Several hundred miles of this and he will dash back across the State in the trailer for his Monday night engagement in Memphis, at the southeast corner of the State.

From there he will speed 320 miles east to Chattanooga, and on to Benton, another 75 miles. After several hundred miles of roaring innuendos, charges and promises there, he will sprint back to Nashville, another 200 miles, arriving there Wednesday, the day before the vote.

Yet the wiseacres say that Browning's quest is futile. Behind this election, as in all Tennessee politics for more than a quarter of a century, stands the rugged shadow of "the red snapper," Edward Hull Crump, the benevolent, stern boss of Memphis.

Memphis is in Shelby County, most populous in the State. Its voting strength, sometimes (if needed) as high as 60,000, averages around 45,000. For years Shelby County has voted en bloc for the Crump candidate. Two years ago when Browning was Crump's choice for the Governorship, Browning won easily, with Shelby County in his pocket. In 1934, as a sample of the precision with which the machine operates, McKellar, Representative Walter Chandler and all 12 members of the Shelby delegation to the State House received the identical vote of 46,363 votes each. Opponents received a negligible figure, less than a thousand votes.

One election in particular is cited, a minor struggle for minor position, earlier in the '30's. The unfortunate anti-Crump candidate, who had more than 35 relatives in Memphis alone, received exactly five votes.

Shelby County, it must be noted, does not report its vote totals as the votes are counted. For more than 25 years the system has been, it is said, to study the vote carefully as it comes in throughout the State and then to vote Shelby County as necessary. Gov. Browning says this, and admits it helped him in 1936. Shelby County returns are always made suddenly and in one grand total, about midnight of election night.

Boar Helps Interview.

Stepping out to survey the blowout after the shrieking sirens and breathless skid had failed to dislodge the boar, Gov. Browning consented to the interview, in which he spoke optimistically of winning, and swore he would take at least one-third of Shelby County's vote.

In Hohenwald the trailer drew up before the schoolhouse, a dun-colored two-story building. The sound engineer hooked up a microphone to the three mammoth public address speakers on the trailer's roof, and Browning was off in a spray of oratory.

Before him crowded a silent, free-spitting audience of overall-clad mountaineers, unshaven almost to a man, with great walrus mustaches uniformly adorning the elders. In sharp contrast were the pretty, well-dressed young girls and the washed and bright faces of the silent, attentive children. Here and there an old-fashioned poke-bonnet shadowed a mother's face, while quietly through the audience roved a number of hound dogs, occasionally thrusting a cold nose into a dangling hand.

Ford to Fight 'Spy' Ruling at Buffalo Plant

Labor Board Orders 50 Men Reinstated; Allows 10 Days for Appeal.

By the Associated Press.

The Ford Motor Co. is expected to fight a decision by a Labor Board examiner, published yesterday, that it was guilty of labor spying and other antiunion activity at its Buffalo, N. Y., assembly plant.

Reporting, among other things, that the company circulated anti-union literature and was responsible for tearing down a union banner, the examiner recommended that the board require Ford to rehire 50 C. I. O. workers and cease "interference" with union organization.

Red Angle Charged.

Examiner Francis M. Shea, basing his recommendations on a 12-day public hearing in Buffalo last winter, said the 50 men ordered reinstated with back pay, either were discharged or refused employment after a layoff because of their membership in the C. I. O. Auto Workers Union.

Shea said the management distributed to its workers literature attempting to identify unionism with "communism" and "rackets."

The report on the literature introduced a new fictional character into labor board records—"Smoke Stack Joe."

One of the circulated pamphlets, Shea said, purported to be the "Musings of Smoke Stack Joe" on labor organization. His "homespun" philosophy, the examiner's report disclosed, was that union dues went to pay for "big cars, airplanes, swell offices and big salaries" of union executives.

Ten Days for Appeal.

The examiner ruled that the circulation of the pamphlets constituted "a direct appeal to the working men to avoid labor organizations and a threat that the consequences of organization will be that their wage level will decline."

The management was given ten days within which to comply with Shea's recommendations, or file exceptions and arrange for oral argument before the board. Failure to do either will result in issuance of a board order. If that were not observed the fight could be taken to the courts.

A similar set of trial examiner's recommendations were issued against the Ford St. Louis assembly plant July 7, but the management was granted 30 days from July 17 in which to file exceptions.

SEC Counsel Says He May Subpena Hopson to Inquiry

Francis H. Baldy, counsel of the Securities and Exchange Commission in the Utilities Power & Light Corporation hearings, yesterday threatened to subpena Howard C. Hopson, utility magnate, to testify before the commission regarding organization of the General Stockholders Protective Committee.

Harry Reid, chairman of the committee, questioned as to the interests which formed the committee, said the only information he had was that Hopson had asked him to serve on the committee. When the SEC counsel did not get the desired information, he told Edward Johnson, trial examiner, that it would be desirable to question Hopson. Johnson took the request under advisement.

Hopson was a central figure in congressional investigations into utility lobbying against the 1935 holding company act.

U. S. '38 Income Of $61,000,000,000 Declared Certain

By the Associated Press.

Government experts said yesterday the 1938 national income was virtually certain to exceed $61,000,000,000.

In his budget message to Congress, President Roosevelt had predicted a drop from $68,000,000,000 in 1937 to $56,000,000,000 in 1938.

The Commerce Department estimated on Thursday income for the first half of 1938 was $30,630,000,000.

Department officials said the prospective $7,000,000,000 reduction from 1937 might be lessened still further. Usually income payments fall off in midsummer, but this year they have been moving upward.

Supt. Edgar A. Bocock, of Gallinger Hospital, standing atop the nurses' home, points to the new $750,000 medical building—as a Post artist visualizes it—which will be built in front (west) of the present main building, now used for both medical and surgical cases. The 200-bed tuberculosis building, also a PWA project, will be built in front of the medical building, and the 150-bed children's ward building, yet to be acted upon by the PWA, will be erected in front of that. All the new structures will be connected by passageways.

2 D. C. Savants On Plane Were To Study Germs

Dean McKinley, of G. W., and Dr. Fred Meier Had 'Sky Hook.'

Waters of the "typhoon cradle" of the Pacific Ocean, somewhere between the Island of Guam and Manilla, last night were believed to hide the fate of two distinguished Washington scientists, lost, with four other passengers and a crew of nine, aboard the giant Hawaii Clipper.

The Washingtonians, Dr. Earl B. McKinley, dean of the George Washington Medical School, and Dr. Fred C. Meier, plant pathologist of the Department of Agriculture, were on their way to the Far East, collaborating on an expedition to investigate the possibility that germs injurious to animal and plant life are whisked from continent to continent through the upper air.

Their survey was being conducted for the National Research Council. A fortnight ago they left here and flew to San Francisco, with their "sky hook," a device perfected by Dr. Meier, in conjunction with Col. Charles A. Lindberg. The "sky hook," with other scientific equipment, was used to gather microscopic life, borne by the wind in the upper reaches of the sky.

Planned Hongkong Stay.

Both scientists expected to continue their experiments during the entire round trip by air, the Medical Society of the District of Columbia revealed yesterday.

They planned to go to Hongkong, and at their earliest convenience, return to Washington.

Much of Dr. McKinley's time has been spent in the Philippines, and he is no stranger .. the Far East. In the islands he studied leprosy at the Culion Colony, where he announced the isolation of the leprosy germ after extended research.

"We hope to develop an antigen for skin tests which insures perfect immunity," he asserted last year in Manilla.

The physician, who has been dean of the George Washington Medical School since 1931, was educated at the University of Michigan and the Pasteur Institute at the University of Brussels, in Belgiuum.

For many years he served in the Philippines as field director of the Rockefeller Foundation, in Manila. He also was a member of the advisory committee on leprosy to the governor general of the islands.

Dr. McKinley also served with distinction as director of the School of Tropical Medicine in Puerto Rico. He was a captain in the Medical Reserve Corps and later an Army Intelligence officer during the World War.

A fellow of the American Medical Association and a member of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and numerous other scientific organizations, he was on the faculties of the University of Michigan, Baylor University and Columbia University from 1919 to 1927. He came to George Washington from Puerto Rico in 1931.

Planned Leprosy Tests.

In 1935 he published a book, "The Geography of Disease," which showed the results of extended studies in the distribution of all forms of infectious disease in all parts of the world.

During a layover in Manila on the way back, Dr. McKinley intended to continue a study involving skin tests of island lepers, the medical society explained last night.

Dr. Meier is a graduate of Harvard University, where he received his master's degree in 1917. However, he has been with the Department of Agriculture since 1915.

He was principal pathologist with the Bureau of Plant Industry until 1934, when he was made a senior scientist in the extension service.

It has been his prediction that expanded aeronbiological research should assist students in the search for more effective methods for checking hay fever and other allergic ailments, and in charting the movement through the air of insects, which prey upon mammals and plants.

Dr. Meier was an author of note in his field.

room employes and had discouraged membership in the C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers.

The board ordered reinstatement of 18 C. I. O. members, discharged for failure to join the A. F. L. union, voided the A. F. L. contract with the company and ordered the concern to bargain with the C. I. O. group as exclusive bargaining agency for all employes.

The board overruled its trial examiner's findings in regard to the contract and the company refusal to bargain with the C. I. O., holding the record disclosed "the company's open hostility to the U. A. W. and favoritism to the I. A. M."

Declaring the decision "amazing," Padway asserted that "bit by bit, through the process of sophistry and specious reasoning, the board is establishing precedents whereby the rights of craft workers are being whittled away to a point where the denial of skilled craft representation where the unskilled workers predominate . . . will become a reality."

To "Abolish" Craft Units.

He charged that the decision "is an effort on the part of the board to abolish the craft as a unit for collective bargaining."

Charges of board favoritism to the C. I. O. have been numerous in A. F. of L. ranks.

President William Green, of the federation, has taken the complaint to President Roosevelt, and Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, has sought an investigation of the reported "bias." Last February, J. Warren Madden, board chairman, before a Senate judiciary subcommittee that was considering such an inquiry, denied the bias charge and said that at that time the A. F. of L. had won 14 out of 20 decisions involving collective bargaining representation by the two hostile groups.

On Monday of this week the board nullified a closed shop contract between the A. F. of L. and the Ward Baking Co., of Baltimore, and ordered an election among employes to decide whether they wanted to be represented by the C. I. O. or the A. F. of L. union.

It also voided an election the A. F. of L. had won among employes of the Tennessee Copper Co., on the grounds that foremen of the company had coerced employes to vote for the A. F. of L. union.

Union Agent Named.

The National Mediation Board certified yesterday the International Brotherhood of Firemen, Oilers and Railway Shop Laborers as the representative of power house employes and shop laborers of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad Co.

victims, Rose Marie Petta, 2428 Fourteenth street northeast, and Daniel Johnson, 1611 Varnum street northwest, clung to the side of their craft until Harbor Police rescued them.

An automobile stalled in the Rock Creek Ford, near the Zoo, and was overturned by the current. Police retrieved the car with a tow truck.

Firemen of No. 11 Truck Co. were called to a house at 6603 Fifth street northwest to remove a large tree that was blown onto the roof.

Running to catch a street car at Fourteenth street and New York avenue, Margaret Kinter, 26, of Colonial Village, Va., fell and suffered a broken ankle. She was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Trees were uprooted by the high wind in several sections of the city. A tree fell across the automobile of Joseph A. Ellis, parked in front of his home at 1248 P street northeast, causing considerable damage.

Other trees were reported down on Nineteenth street between Pennsylvania avenue and I street northwest, at Sixteenth and Corcoran streets northwest, Tenth and O streets northwest, 626 Tenth street southwest, and 1248 T street northeast.

A telephone pole at Connecticut avenue and Van Ness street northwest was struck by lightning during the height of the storm. A wire was torn loose and endangered passersby until repairs were made by a Pepco crew.

Houses were darkened in several sections of North Columbus street in Alexandria when a power pole was knocked down by high winds at Princess and Royal streets. Service also was temporarily stopped in the Fort Hunt section, due to the storm, and a tree was blown onto power lines at Alexandria avenue and Wythe streets, in Alexandria.

Forage and grain crops in Fairfax County, Va., on which dairy farmers depended for ensilage and stock feed for the coming winter, suffered an unestimated amount of damage.

Telephone service in the county was temporarily disrupted.

In Washington traffic control lights on E street northwest from Seventh to Third streets, and on Sixth from D street to Massachusetts avenue, were put out of service.

Police also were called to Morris road southeast when a live wire was blown down during the height of the storm.

Airliners scheduled to land at the Washington Airport during the storm were advised to slow down until winds and rain had subsided. Police radio scout cars were ordered out of service when a series of crackling lightning bolts commenced to precede the rumbling of the continuous thunder.

The rain and wind drove the mercury down from 90 to 69 in less than half an hour. Before the downpour, combined heat and excessive humidity prostrated six persons yesterday.

Those overcome by the excessive combination of heat and humidity were Bruce Geddes, 30, Chevy Chase, Md., who collapsed as he emerged from a restaurant at 811 Twelfth street northwest and injured his head when he fell to the pavement; Henry M. Thompson, 413 Second street southeast, and William Smith, of the same address; Geneva Greene, 422 Second street northwest; Henry Long, 7 Gessford court southeast, and Nick Reese, 52, 1118 I street southeast.

At least five branches of the Government released their employes early in the afternoon as the mercury continued to mount. An exodus was made from between 1 and 2:30 p. m. from the Procurement offices at Ninth and I streets streets northwest, and from offices of the Coast Guard and Customs divisions. Most of the Government buildings are now air conditioned, but one spokesman in a non-air-cooled office said: "We're still at work. Those who make the decisions about hot weather are all in air-cooled offices."

The forecast for today is fair and cooler.

The circus closed several weeks ago at Scranton, Pa. It was overwhelmed by financial and labor troubles.

Laminated Glass Ordered by ICC On Interstate Cars

After that date only laminated glass will be allowed in making replacements or in new equipment.

Representatives of the Chrysler, General Motors, Ford, Packard, and Hudson motor companies unsuccessfully urged the commission to allow case-hardened glass except in windshields.

Clipper

cials were notified a Philippine long distance telephone company employe heard a plane three hours later over Luhuy Island, in the San Bernardino Straits, at the southern tip of Luzon Island.

"The plane, which was not discernable above clouds, was proceeding west on the course flown by the clippers, airways officials declared. Luhuy Island is approximately 250 miles southeast of Manila.)

With six passengers and nine crew members the clipper left Guam at 11:39 a. m. (Pacific standard time) Thursday for a 1,580-mile jump to Manila, terminus of her regular 8,200 miles route from California.

The alarm spread when four hours passed without a routine radio report from the plane, which usually gave its position and flying conditions every 30 minutes.

Fourteen warships sped out of Manila Bay to join the hunt. Planes made ready to leave the Philippine east coast to search the shore line on the possibility the big aircraft reached insular waters.

The plane's radio silence carried forebodings to the searchers. She was equipped to send and receive messages from the ocean surface, and, barring the possibility of a high dive into the Pacific, was considered as seaworthy as any small yacht.

From her log as made public by Pan American Airways, operators of the transpacific airline, there was an inkling also the big clipper was heading into unfavorable weather. The last message mentioned rain. For several hundred miles she had been speeding through a moderately rough wind.

Despite the negative result from the initial searching, Pan American Airways officials remained optimistic.

The Clipper was in charge of Leo Terletzky, ace Pan American pilot, and K. A. Kennedy, division traffic manager of the company, was among the passengers.

Two From Washington.

The other passengers were Maj. Howard C. French, of Portland, Oreg.; Dr. Earle B. McKinley, noted authority on leprosy, and Dr. Fred C. Meier, principal pathologist of the Department of Agriculture, both of Washington, D. C.; E. E. Wyman, Curtiss-Wright Aircraft official, of New York City, and Wah Sung Choy, Chinese restaurateur, of Jersey City, N. J.

In Terletzky's crew were First Officer M. A. Walker, Second Officer G. M. Davis, Third Officer J. M. Sauceda, Fourth Officer J. W. Jewett, Engineer H. L. Cox, Assistant Engineer T. B. Tatum, Radio Officer W. McCarty and Steward I. Parker.

The disappearance of the Hawaii Clipper did not affect the scheduled departure of his sister ship, the China Clipper, from Alameda, Calif., with the usual crew and a passenger list.

Wives Await News Here.

While the Army and Navy searched by air and sea for the missing Hawaii Clipper last night, two Washington women were valiant.

They were Mrs. Earl B. McKinley, wife of the 46-year-old dean of George Washington University medical school, and Mrs. Fred C. Meier, wife of the distinguished Department of Agriculture plant pathologist, whose husbands were among the six passengers of the vanished air giant.

Both Mrs. McKinley and Mrs. Meier were surrounded by relatives and friends—and in constant touch by radio with the drama that was being enacted more than 10,000 miles away.

Their answer on the most trying periods of their lives was this:

"We believe they are alive. They will be found."

At her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue, Mrs. McKinley was under the care of a physician, as a "precautionary" measure.

With her was her pretty 18-year-old daughter, Janet, a graduate of Penn Hall School, who is to enter college this autumn.

"I am optimistic," said Mrs. McKinley. "I feel they will be found soon. I am not afraid."

Out in her pleasant house at 6402 Beechwood drive, Chevy Chase, Md., Mrs. Meier also was optimistic.

She was surrounded by her friends, but she did not let them discuss her missing 45-year-old husband.

"The suspense is dreadful," she said through her friends, and then she added pluckily:

"Perhaps at sunup they'll be found."

Joseph Byrns, Jr., Out for Congress

Nashville, Tenn., July 29 (AP).—Joseph W. Byrns, jr., son of the late Speaker of the House, is making a bid for the Congressional seat his father occupied for more than 27 years as a Representative from Tennessee's "Hermitage district," Andrew Jackson's home.

Byrns, a tall, dark-haired, 34-year-old attorney who resigned a $5,000-a-year post as lawyer for the HOLC to make the race, is opposing Richard M. Atkinson, elected two years ago after the elder Byrns' death.

To Byrns there is but one issue—"Roosevelt or anti-Roosevelt, and I stand where my father stood. I am for Roosevelt."

Utility Is Urged To Sell to TVA

The Federal Power Commission last night approved sale of Tennessee Public Service Co. properties to the City of Knoxville, the Appalachian Power Co. and the Tennessee Valley Authority for $9,333,013.

Conditions of the sale were arranged after protracted conferences between the utility's officials and representatives of the purchasers as part of the Administration's new policy of financing public purchase of private properties in the TVA area to prevent duplication by Federal power projects.

re-elected to their respective offices of treasurer and secretary.

Even before it is named, the committee's attention has been directed to New Jersey and the boss rule of Mayor Frank Hague The first appeal to the new committee came in the form of a letter from David Clendenin, treasurer of the Workers Defense League, which asked "immediate study" by the committee of an opinion handed down on July 13 by Vice Chancellor Leon Berry, of New Jersey, which characterized "free speech" as a "qualified constitutional right," subordinate to property rights, in an order restraining the C. I. O. Furniture Workers Union from distributing circulars and carrying on other activities.

Other Cases Listed.

Indicating that the new committee is likely to be besieged with requests for aid, Clendenin's letter cited other allegedly "glaring examples of violations of free speech, free press and free assembly that deserve your committee's attention."

He added: "These are only a few recent examples which rank in importance with the Jersey City situation. There have been others in the past of equal or greater importance and there are many other current but less spectacular cases." Clendenin called attention to the fact that Arthur T. Vanderbilt, of Newark, N. J., who retired today as president of the American Bar Association, has been counsel for Norman Thomas, a member of the national committee of the Workers Defense League, in the latter's efforts to see redress against Mayor Hague in Jersey City.

Hogan Is Unopposed.

A second demand that the new committee investigate the Jersey City situation came when the House of Delegates referred to it a resolution introduced by Charles H. Strong, delegate representing the Association of the Bar of the City of New York.

Hogan assumed office as president of the American Bar Association for the coming year at a convention luncheon here today. His election this morning was a mere formality. He had been the sole nominee, and nominations have been closed for more than 40 days. A large portion of his first presidential address, delivered at the luncheon, was devoted to the problem of protecting individuals against violations of their constitutional rights.

Lehman to Name Frieda Miller to Industrial Post

Albany, N. Y., July 29 (AP).—Gov. Lehman said today he would appoint Miss Frieda S. Miller State industrial commissioner to succeed Elmer F. Andrews, recently appointed Federal wage-hour law administrator.

Miss Miller has been director of the bureau of women in industry since 1929, having had charge of surveys that led to establishment of minimum wages in the laundry industry, hotels and restaurants and beauty parlors.

Miss Miller is a graduate of Milwaukee-Downer College, was research assistant in the social economy department of Bryn Mawr College in 1916 and 1917, and served as secretary of the Philadelphia Women's Trade Union League from 1918 to 1923

Stamps, Orders Total More Than Currency

By the Associated Press.

An audit of postal transactions showed yesterday that $8,116,000,000 in stamps and money orders passed through the hands of postal employes during the last 12 months. That is about $1,500,000,000 more than all the United States money in circulation, but officials explained that much of it had to be counted twice—coming in and going out.

The principal bill in the Administration program to checkmate it would change the State's law to give only the Legislature the power to investigate impeachable officials. The other bills would take over the projected court inquiry, assure that the attorney general could supersede a county prosecutor and appoint a House committee to carry out an "open" investigation.

Earle Out for Senate.

Gov. Earle is his party's nominee for the United States Senate.

Meanwhile a so-called "fake telegram lobby" in Congress three years ago was cited as parallel to a bombardment of wire messages protesting Gov. Earle's legislative program.

Denis J. Driscoll, former congressman and now chairman of the State's public utility commission, observed:

"Many of these telegrams appear virtually identical in thought and wording, resembling to a marked degree telegrams which I and other members of Congress received three years ago during the debate on the public utility act of 1935, the vast majority of which telegrams I later demonstrated to be fraudulent."

The telegrams, addressed to Democratic legislators, were estimated by wire companies at more than 6,000. They came the day after Representative Elwood J. Turner, Republican leader in the House, appealed to the "people of Pennsylvania" to call upon their Representatives and Senators to preserve the "free institution" of the grand jury.

Barbara Yields Count Right to Bring Up Lance

Counsel's Statement Hints She May Drop Danish Citizenship.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 29.—The bitter marital troubles of Count and Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow have been ended "amicably" with a deed of separation as a prelude to a Danish divorce.

The countess, the former Barbara Hutton, American-born heiress to $40,000,000 of the Woolworth dime store fortune, settled an undivulged sum upon their two-year-old son Lance, solicitors said today announcing the separation.

Text of the settlement between Count and Countess Court Haugwitz-Reventlow as announced by their solicitors follows:

"During the last week or so, as a result of discussions which have been in progress between the Count and Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow and their legal advisors, it is now possible to announce that all matters in dispute between them have been amicably settled

"The count and countess have decided to live apart and separate. The deed of separation, valid in accordance both with Danish and with English law, has in fact been signed by both parties.

"The document is subject to approval of the Danish minister of justice.

"In due course it is proposed to take steps to have the terms of deed separation recorded in the English courts in order to give effect to arrangements which have been made regarding the custody of their son, Lance.

"It may not be generally known that Lance is heir presumptive to the Danish family estate of Hardenberg, which is one of the largest estates in Denmark and that in that capacity Lance may one day be head of a well-known Danish family.

"It has accordingly been agreed in a document signed between the count and countess that the count shall enjoy the position under Danish law, the nearest English rendering of which is 'parental right,' and which secures to him the ultimate decision with regard to education, religion, and professional career of his son.

Will Divide His Time.

"At the same time provisions have been made that while the child remains of tender years the countess shall have the care of the child for the greater part of the year, that when he becomes of school age he will spend one half of his school holidays with the count and the other half with the countess.

"The count and countess have parted on terms of complete mutual understanding and the count already had had numerous opportunities of seeing his son.

"According to Danish law Lance would have absolute right on his mother's death to share in her estate. As the countess, however, may not always preserve her Danish nationality, she has decided to settle an appropriate sum on Lance forthwith, and a settlement of such a character acceptable to all parties has been duly executed. The count is one of the trustees of that settlement.

"No other settlements have been made and the count has waived any rights which he may have under Danish law to one-half of the common property of the parties to the marriage."

The former Barbara Hutton married Count Haugwitz-Reventlow May 14, 1935, in Reno, on the day after obtaining her divorce from Prince Mdivani.

Castle Fears War May Result From Official Speeches

By the Associated Press.

William R. Castle, former Undersecretary of State and now administrative assistant to the National Republican chairman, warned the Nation last night that Administration criticism of other countries might lead to war and subsequent dictatorship.

Over the Mutual radio network, Castle declared:

"When the President makes a threat of quarantine of Japan, the Japanese government is offended and the chauvinistic forces of the nation are irritated; when a minor official of the State Department lectures the German government on what is good for the German people, the Germans are angered—unless they are sensible enough to laugh.

"The point is that Government officials have enough to do to keep this country in order and are merely impertinent when they take it on themselves to tell other countries what to do. It all adds to the strain of the already dangerous international situation."

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department issued some "spicy" statistics yesterday proving that the American public spent $12,000,000 last year to tickle its palate.

Mary L. Bynum, specialist, declared in the first official study of spice imports, that 110,467,000 pounds of condiments entered the country last year.

The mustard seed, used principally for decorating hot dogs, accounted for more than 17,000,000 pounds of the year's imports.

Benes Pleads For Union of Democracies

Czech President 'Hopes but Does Not Ask' for U. S. Money Help.

By the United Press.

Prague, July 29.—President Benes, pledging his country's readiness to repel by arms any German threat to her integrity, today appealed to the United States and other world democracies to band together against "the war-making countries."

Addressing a group of American college students at the presidential palace, Benes emphasized that the democratic countries far outnumber the totalitarian nations and that in unity they can assure world peace.

Czechoslovakia, he said, looks to the United States for moral support in the present Czech-Nazi crisis involving the German minority of 3,500,000.

Hopes for U. S. Aid.

He hopes—but does not ask—for financial and political support from the United States in event of any emergency, Benes told the students who were led by Robert Spivack, of the University of Cincinnati, secretary of the International Students' Service Organization just returned from a tour of Russia.

The President stressed that Soviet Russia is entitled to become a member of any world democratic front because Moscow has abandoned her ideas of a world revolution and is concentrating on peaceful home development.

The United States, Great Britain, France, Belguim, Soviet Russia, Czechoslovakia and the Scandinavian powers should make up the antiwar bloc, Benes explained, although Italy and Germany should not be necessarily excluded.

People Ready to Fight.

The Germans and Italians, he said, have many internal problems and must realize that they can not profit from war.

Asked whether Czechoslovakia was prepared to fight for her independence and sovereignty, he answered quickly that all the people of his nation were prepared to fight no matter what happens around not matter what happens around them.

Even a little nation can win, he said, if it is prepared.

Then he added that he still was optimistic in his hopes for a peaceful solution of Czechoslovakia's troubles.

Greek Troops Crush Cretan Farm Revolt

By the United Press.

Athens, Greece, July 29.—Dictator Metaxas announced tonight that government troops had suppressed a "Communist" revolt in which armed peasants seized the fortified city of Canea, capital of the island of Crete.

A nephew of Eleutherios Venizelos, Greek firebrand who died in exile two years ago after failing in an attempted anti-monarchist revolution, was said by the government to have led the today's insurrection.

A communique tonight said 7,000 government troops landed on the island from four destroyers and aided by 25 fighting planes encircled and then seized Canea—150 miles south of Athens in the Mediterranean—and released the barricaded military garrison.

Rebels Are Taken.

Most of the 400 armed peasants of the island who joined the revolt under Aristomenis Mitsotakis, the nephew of Venizelos, were said to have been captured although a few escaped into the countryside before the government troops surrounded the town.

Gen. Metaxas, who became a full-fledged dictator on August 4, 1936, when he obtained all the key ministries under the monarchy of King George II, issued a proclamation saying he was determined to impose order "at any cost."

"I believe Cretans will keep far away from the insurgents, thus showing their solidarity and remaining in a sate of peace," he said.

Casualties were not revealed, but it was stressed in government communiques that the uprising was confined to Canea—a city of 25,000 population and capital of a department of 70,000—and the rest of the island and all the Greek mainland were tranquil.

Planes Drop Leaflets.

Canea was under martial law tonight on direct instructions from Metaxas, and government troops patrolled the streets, the crumbling Venetian fortifications and the arsenals, artillery placements and foundries that make the city a strategic one.

Pope Deplores Lack of Charity Of Anti-Semites

'Why Should Italy Imitate Germany?' Pontiff Asks in Osservatore.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, July 29.—A reply by Pope Pius XI to the new doctrine of Italian fascism, which holds that Jews "do not belong to the Italian race," was published today in the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano.

The Pope did not mention Jews by name, but he listed charity toward others as an article of the Catholic faith, and said: "We do not want to separate anything in the human family."

His holiness linked the new Italian doctrine with German racial policy when he said it might be asked: "Why in the world Italy unfortunately felt the need to imitate Germany?"

The Pope said these things yesterday when he addressed missionary students of 37 nationalities who visited him at his summer residence, Castel Gandolfo.

Not since his encyclical of June 29, 1931, on Fascist education of youth, had the Pope so directly taken issue with Premier Mussolini.

His remarks, as embodied in L'Osservatore Romano's resume, stressed the difference between the church's conception of mankind as "one single, great, universal human family" and conceptions which "mean barriers erected between men and other men, between folk and other folk."

Fascism's new racial doctrine, promulgated July 14 by a group of professors under the auspices of Mussolini's ministry of popular culture, proclaimed the "Aryanism" of the Italian people.

In asserting that Jews could not be fused with Aryan Italians without altering the character of Italians, the pronouncement caused considerable disquiet among Italy's 47,000 Jews.

The Pontiff, at the same time, raised his voice against attacks on Catholic Action, a lay organization which in the past has been a center of friction between Fascism and the church and which had been attacked by a section of the Fascist press since announcement of the new racialism.

"Who injures Catholic Action, injures the Pope and who injures the Pope, dies," the Pontiff was quoted. The word "dies" was interpreted to mean "dies spiritually."

Catholics, who regard conciliation between the church and the Italian state—the Lateran treaties of February 11, 1929—as one of fascism's greatest achievements, were greatly concerned lest present trends might lead to a new break.

Tokyo, July 29 (U.P.).—Striking geishas, who are "sitting down" in a temple at Yamaguchi in protest against their employers taking a 50 per cent cut on tips, tonight rejected a police offer of compromise and said they were ready to stay on strike indefinitely. The geishas brought food, water and a bathtub to the temple.

Chinese Bomb 7 Ships, Killing 2,000 Japanese

By the United Press.

Shanghai, July 29.—Chinese forces launched a savage counter-attack by land and air today, in an effort to stem the Japanese advance on Hankow, and their military headquarters reported they had bombed seven Japanese warships and killed more than 2,000 men.

The famous Chinese "iron bird" squadron reported to have raided a concentration of Japanese warships in the Yangtse near Hukow, bombed "two large warships and five small ones" and returned to their base after a dogfight with Japanese pursuit planes.

Meanwhile Chinese reports from Taihu, mountain stronghold which the Japanese occupied yesterday in their drive into Hupeh province, said the Chinese had withdrawn to new entrenchments after an onslaught on the Japanese vanguard in which 2,000 Japanese were reported killed.

Advices from Hankow said the Chinese had determined on a plan of slow retreat, without risking a major engagement, in which they hoped to wear out the Japanese and protract the waf.

Diplomatic sources indicated that efforts of other powers to intervene were "useless" because the Chinese had decided on this strategy, and would withdraw from Hankow without a major clash if the Japanese approach that city.

Japanese sources admitted the Chinese had raided their warship concentration, and charged they had "indiscriminately" bombed a Japanese hospital ship. The ship, according to the report, was flying a Red Cross flag and was painted white with bright markings.

The Japanese also charged Chinese junks bearing Chinese troops were moving up the Yangtse under cover of American and British gunboats stationed near Kiukiang.

The Japanese, meanwhile, continued their aerial raids on the area around Hankow, bombing Tienkiachen, 40 miles west of Kiukiang, where the next engagement in the Yangtse campaign is expected.

7-Day Food Strike Blamed on Hitler

Los Angeles, Calif., July 29 (AP). Still refusing food and water after seven days, Theodore Henry Hesselbein, German writer, was under observation today in the county jail hospital.

Dr. Benjamin Blank, jail physician, said Hesselbein would be allowed his rights—"his right to refuse food or water if he wishes"—for the time being. He added that the 40-year-old hunger striker's condition was not critical.

Hesselbein, held since Wednesday when grand theft charges against him were dismissed for lack of evidence, refused to eat and drink to "call attention to the plight caused by Hitler."

4 Mobs Fired On; 50 Dead; Rangoon Riots in 4th Day

Rangoon, Burma, July 29 (AP).—Military police opened fire on rioting mobs in four different parts of Rangoon tonight, killing four persons and wounding 16 in efforts to quell clashes of Moslems and Buddhists.

In four days of fighting through barricaded streets of this city a total of 50 persons have been killed and 350 injured.

Authorities posted a series of drastic measures to restore order. They warned that public assembly of more than five persons was forbidden and crowds would be dispersed by force. Soldiers and police were ordered to shoot any persons attacking another or found looting.

Armored cars patroled the streets, some of which were guarded by machine gun posts, but looting was reported.

Rev. Mr. Scholl Finds Loyalty In Mountains and D. C. Slums

THE REV. MR. SCHOLL.

The experience of being transferred in the middle of June from a mountain resort 1,500 feet above sea level to a post in the sweltering city slums might tend to discourage the average young minister, but not the Rev. Richard T. Scholl, new pastor of the Gorsuch Methodist Episcopal Church, 1105 Fourth street southwest, one of the oldest congregations in Washington.

Coming here from Canadensis, Pa., in the Poconos, where he served for two years in the Canadensis Church and the McComas Chapel nearby, his first important step was the inauguration of Sunday evening services during the summer.

"The move was requested by many members," he said yesterday, adding that "the loyalty of my parishioners has been remarkable. Their experience in living in this area has brought them to realize that the church is indispensable, and they have backed me to the limit in getting started," he declared.

Improved housing facilities will be a boon to Christianity in the Southwest, according to the cleric, who sees in elevated standards of living a stronger desire on the part of the individual to "follow Christ's way."

"These people need a purpose in life," he pointed out, "and the church can help them find that purpose."

While occupying the pulpit of the Herndon, Va., Methodist Church from 1931 to 1935, the Rev. Mr. Scholl attended American University, where, he said, pressure of studies prevented his active participation in the sports he enjoys.

"I've always been 'crazy' about playing baseball and tennis," he grinned, "but have had little time to indulge."

While preaching in the Poconos, he studied at Drew University, Madison, N. J., where he received his doctor of divinity degree in June.

Born in Lancaster, Pa., where he received his early education, he later attended Asbury College in Kentucky, prior to enrolling at American University. In 1931 he married an Akron, Ohio, girl who has been a loyal helpmate in his pastoral duties.

Fire Spurred Hummer Class To a Promise

Fulfill Vow of 1919 Today by Helping Needy, Sick, Training Teachers.

Christmas eve, 1919, while their gifts for the needy were going up in flames, women of the No. 3 Bible class of Epworth M. E. Church South, many of them in tears, gathered outside the burning edifice at Seventh and I streets northwest, sang carols, and pledged to finish the work they had begun.

True to its promise, the group—now known as the G. W. F. Hummer Class—is providing daily meals for several needy families, sponsoring services at the Central Union Mission, cheering the sick and shutins, and training future Sunday school teachers.

The educational project, an intensive course of Bible study, which was launched many years ago by Hildreth F. Winn, has enabled hundreds of class members to qualify for administrative duties in the church. Former students are teaching in many parts of America. Winn is now a resident of St. Petersburg, Fla., where he is continuing his interest in Bible class work.

While the present structure at Thirteenth street and North Carolina avenue southeast was being completed, the class held sessions in the parsonage, and church services were conducted in the Carolina Theater. Upon moving into the new church in 1922, the women waged a successful membership drive. Not satisfied, however, they promoted another campaign shortly afterward, which increased the membership to over 200.

Mrs. G. G. Martin, wife of the present pastor, is now teaching the class, which has an average attendance of over 100 women. Mrs. Marian S. Geiman is her assistant. Mrs. R. Tucker, now deceased, and Mrs. H. M. Cantor, both wives of former ministers at Epworth, led the organization at various times.

The "sweetheart of the class" is Mrs. Martha (Mother) Pettit, 86, who has missed less than 20 Sundays in her 20 years affiliation with the group, which is a member of the District of Columbia Bible Class Association. Also connected with the class are Mrs. Clara Short and Mrs. William C. Nicholson, both of whom recently observed their golden wedding anniversaries. Mrs. N. K. Jarvis and Mrs. Elizabeth Murray, who were christened in the old Epworth Church which stood in the Southwest, are the oldest members.

Virginia U. Gets $61,363 Increase From PWA Fund

Twenty-four hours after PWA Administrator Harold Ickes accused Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, of trying to ride into office on PWA coat tails by claiming credit for getting PWA loans and grants for the University of Virginia, Ickes granted the university an additional $81,363 for improvements to cost $136,363.

Representative Smith had made public a letter from President John Lloyd Newcombe, of the university, thanking him for his efforts in obtaining the PWA grants.

Ickes declared that Smith's influence on application was nil. He then said Smith had "obstructed, opposed and fought every PWA bill."

Two other grants for Virginia towns were announced yesterday. Pearisburg got $59,000 for schools, to cost $132,000; and Suffolk was given $20,250 for two schools, to cost $45,000.

Tunnel And Memorial.

President Roosevelt's request for a restudy of the Thomas Circle underpass is made in spite of the careful consideration already given this project. The appropriation of funds for the traffic tunnel came as a result of a survey begun seven years ago by the District Highway Department. In the minds of local officials who are endeavoring to relieve the city's acute traffic congestion there seems to be no question as to the wisdom of this improvement.

Protests against the proposed traffic tunnel are based primarily on esthetic considerations. Residents in the vicinity of Thomas Circle fear that the underpass will render that area less attractive. No doubt Massachusetts avenue would remain a more charming street without any tunnel or other alterations. But the desire to preserve the street as it is must be compromised with the practical necessity of facilitating traffic at this bottleneck.

It does not appear, moreover, that there is any compelling objection to the project on esthetic grounds. Otherwise the Fine Arts Commission would scarcely have approved the design of the proposed tunnel. No mistake can be made, however, by another check. If there is any possibility that a blunder is contemplated, now is the time to make the desirable changes.

The really striking aspect of the President's request is the contrast with his attitude toward the Jefferson Memorial. In that case Mr. Roosevelt is permitting the project to go forward, in spite of strong opposition from the Fine Arts Commission and a chorus of protest from the community. But a restudy of the relatively insignificant tunnel project is asked even after its design has been approved by the commission and after its utility seems to have been established beyond question.

Wise And Reasonable.

Although Washington could certainly benefit from addition of another hospital to the city's facilities, it seems decidedly wise that the Group Health Association has delayed plans to build a medical center for its members.

In its present stage of development—with only 2,600 dues-paying members and each of them already assessed to repay $40,000 to the HOLC—the association is in no position to underwrite a costly hospital. Its plans in this direction were based on the assumption that philanthropic individuals and organizations might contribute toward the costs of construction. However, such contributions would actually be subsidies and, as such, would be out of keeping with the essentially co-operative nature of the enterprise.

Moreover, in announcing the postponement of its hospital discussions, the GHA president has made a reasonable offer to the hospitals directly, and through them to the District Medical Society and others who have been opposing the health insurance attempt. Noting that the legality of the GHA has recently been certified by a local court, Mr. Kirkpatrick suggests that the hospitals now reconsider their refusal to extend courtesy privileges to members of the GHA medical staff.

Agreement with this suggestion on the part of the local medical fraternity would clear the way for a return of a spirit of harmony recently missing from the local health picture.

"Tipperary."

Perhaps the most interesting thing about songs that become immortal through their association with great wars is that so few of them are at all warlike. Indeed, songs written with a deliberate intention of rousing the martial spirit rarely find much favor at the front. One suspects that even the Marseillaise was far more popular with Parisian mobs than with the conscripts at Vilmy and Jemappes.

A better illustration could scarcely be found than "Tipperary," whose author died Thursday in London. Mrs. Howe when she wrote "Mine eyes have seen the glory" may have thought she was influencing history. But no thought could have been much farther from the head of Jack Judge, sometime fishmonger, when on New Year's Day, 1912, he scribbled off some lines that were supposed roughly to express the nostalgia of an expatriated Gael, but were principally meant to carry a lively, rather cloying little air.

In the music halls "Tipperary" meant no more or less than any of a half-dozen other catchy songs. But when it was sung by the British soldiers along the ravaged roads of Flanders it acquired some new and perhaps symbolic significance. Those lads had indeed "a long way to go" and they knew it. Few competent judges of the matter would be likely to say that "Tipperary" was as good a marching tune as the French "Madelon" or the American "Madamoiselle From Armentieres." But neither of these last had anything like its popularity and neither is likely to be as well remembered.

One of the few places where "Tipperary" was never popular was in Tipperary itself. It was not popular anywhere in Ireland. Real Irish songs, as Mr. Chesterton noted, are usually sad, but they are rarely sentimental. Also they are rarely humorous. The Irish were prone to classify "Tipperary" as just another calumny of the Sassenach. What, it was argued, would a decent Irishman be doing in such a sinful place as Leicester Square, anyhow?

The Larger Implications.

There is little doubt that Federal spending has permitted many local government units "to get out of the red" and has enabled "millions of families to balance their budgets." And Secretary Wallace made a very important point when, at a Democratic rally in Iowa, he enlarged upon this assumption of local and individual indebtedness by the central government.

But it does not follow, as Mr. Wallace concludes, that for this reason it is "good that the Federal debt today is as large as it is." Such simple reasoning ignores all the larger implications of the spending program. Unfortunately, it is only temporarily that Americans may be able to ignore them.

The American system of government is not a unitary system. Unlike that of the totalitarian dictatorships it is not based on the idea that the central government should exert direct authority in every aspect of the life of the individual subject. The American system is a Federal system, designed to secure the greatest possible amount of home rule and local self-government. By the Federal Constitution many powers are guaranteed to the States as of right. And each State constitution, in turn, guarantees a large measure of autonomy to its counties and other subdivisions.

Consequently it is not a mere matter of arithmetic, as Mr. Wallace intimates, when the Federal Government assumes debts which by theory and practice alike have always been local responsibilities with us. Even if the total indebtedness involved were not augmented by the new procedure, a far-reaching shift in the traditional balance of the American system would still be involved. Even if projects constructed locally by Federal grants are themselves entirely worthy there is a tangible loss in urging communities to spend money which they cannot or will not raise themselves.

This loss is at the expense of local self-government, which is the very essence of the American system.

The lengthening period of deficit financing is all too clearly arousing a spirit of recklessness in fiscal matters. National debt increase, resulting from the Administration's efforts to combat depression, has heretofore been regarded as a necessary evil. But Secretary Wallace now proclaims that, far from being an evil, the centralization of power involved in the process is a disguised blessing. And he is not alone in holding this very dangerous opinion.

The RFC and the PWA, it is announced, will henceforth co-operate in the financing projects of the latter agency, with the RFC supplying the loans to local communities and the PWA making the outright grants of 45 per cent of the cost of construction. The underlying idea is to force more extensive as well as more rapid disbursement of Federal funds. Secretary Ickes has already said that the new arrangement may permit an additional $250,000,000 of PWA expenditure. All the emphasis is upon the act of spending, with the utility and necessity of the project subordinated and the ability of the local community to support it even less considered.

The complacency with which Mr. Wallace views the rapid rise of the Federal debt, and the zeal with which Messrs. Ickes, Hopkins and Jesse Jones are offering loans and subsidies, is disturbing on other than financial grounds. Ostensibly set up to provide a stimulus to flagging private enterprise, the Government's great spending and lending agencies are steadily changing character. They have already come to exercise a degree of supervisory control over agricultural and industrial processes which is far more likely to weaken private initiative than to strengthen it.

When a government adopts lavish spending as a national policy it is of course compelled to attach conditions to its gifts and loans. These conditions are at the expense of the liberty and independence of the subsidized units and individuals. And the longer the subsidization policy continues the greater is the probability of perpetual bureaucratic domination over the subsidized. Already we have reached the stage where the Secretary of the Interior can publicly condemn the Mayor of Boston for his temerity in seeking to economize by refusing a PWA loan.

We in the United States have been inclined to congratulate ourselves because we do not live under a Fascist regime, which abolishes local autonomy and intentionally subordinates all the interests of the individual to those of the State. But complacency in this respect is out of order.

The advice, admonitions and thinly veiled threats of officials such as Secretaries Wallace and Ickes and RFC Chairman Jones begin to have a decidedly ominous ring. Farmers are urged to qualify for Federal benefits. States and municipalities are persuaded to borrow Federal funds and take Federal grants. Unwilling bankers are importuned to expand their loans or else anticipate usurpation of their functions by Federal lending agencies. In short, bureaucratic domination has already passed from the stage of encouragement and persuasion to that of active pressure. This is a long step towards Fascism.

If the spending program continues to pile up deficits until public confidence in the national credit is destroyed, the day may easily come when the Federal Government will resort to coercion of investors who refuse to buy its securities. If that should happen, Mr. Wallace will have difficulty in persuading the electors that a large Federal debt is a blessing in disguise.

It would then be generally realized that centralized party domination of all local government, and of all types of private economic activity, is the distinguishing and essential characteristic of Fascism. And that, very clearly, is the road on which the present Administration is advancing us.

Mr. Hogan On Human Rights.

Frank J. Hogan chose a significant theme for his inaugural address as president of the American Bar Association. He asked organized lawyers throughout the country to give special heed to the protection of human rights wherever and whenever they may be challenged. That constructive suggestion foreshadows a year of interesting and socially useful activity on the part of the Bar Association.

No president of the Bar Association in recent years has been more fully entitled than Mr. Hogan to this signal honor from his profession. But he does not regard the position as merely honorary. Rather he sees in it an opportunity to advance a cause vital to individual freedom and democratic government. For many years Mr. Hogan has fought encroachment upon those human rights guaranteed by the first ten amendments to the Constitution. His many friends in Washington will be especially pleased that he is now in a position to take the active leadership of this movement.

Oratorical defense of the Bill of Rights has been heard from many sources recently. Mr. Hogan is not willing to have the legal fraternity just a part of the chorus. He has asked the Bar Association to take definite steps to maintain civil liberty in practice as well as theory. If the Bar Association follows his constructive advice, a Committee on Defense of Liberties will be appointed to defend persons whose rights are challenged and who would otherwise go undefended.

Presumably this committee would stand equally ready to act if a member of the C. I. O. should be denied free speech in Jersey City or if an employer should be denied a fair hearing before some administrative agency. For, as Mr. Hogan points out, "denial of, or attack upon, the basic rights of any citizen constitutes a common danger to the rights of all citizens." If civil liberties are to be preserved, they must be scrupulously defended without discrimination as to the politics, the sympathies or the economic status of the individual who has been wronged.

Mr. Hogan could not devote his administration in the Bar Association to a more worthy cause. If lawyers in general give this move their wholehearted support, they will render a great public service and simultaneously enhance the prestige of their profession.

At Harrisburg.

If a great constitutional issue is at stake in Pennsylvania, as Gov. Earle contends, the Legislature has adopted a strange method of dealing with it.

The row in the Keystone State revolves about the right of grand juries to investigate the conduct of State officials. Gov. Earle contends that his administration should be investigated only by the Legislature. His emphasis on the confusion that would arise if grand juries in every county undertook to investigate political charges against the Governor is well taken. But it does not follow that the Legislature should be given the sole right to inquire into alleged misconduct on the part of the executive and other impeachable State officers.

The principle of government by law and not by men implies that public officials have no more than equal standing with other citizens before the law. But Gov. Earle proposes to give them a special status. Grand jury investigations have been one of the most effective weapons in the hands of citizens against corrupt government. But grand juries would be silenced in Pennsylvania when charges are brought against high executive officials. Under this arrangement if officials have enough political support in the Legislature to prevent impeachment they could remain in power despite the gravest of charges.

Bills to stop the Earle investigation and curb the power of grand juries are being rushed through the Legislature at Harrisburg without any apparent attempt to analyze their implications. The proposed inquiry will be taken over by a committee of the House of Representatives, where Gov. Earle has a safe majority. In these circumstances it is difficult to escape the conclusion that the Governor's chief concern is not adherence to the State constitution but merely a shift of this inquiry into the hands of his friends. Such conduct will inevitably raise suspicion that he has something to hide, and that he is willing to make hasty changes in the State's judicial system to avoid revelation.

Life-Saving Net.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The tragic demise of that unfortunate young man who cast himself from a 17-story ledge to a horrible death below brings to mind the nobility and futility of human nature. Here is a man who did not want to live, yet the resources of a great metropolis are mobilized to effect a rescue—though in vain. On the other hand, there are literally hundreds of thousands of poor, defenseless people who love life blasted into eternity at the behest of the mad dogs of war, and very few of our enlightened nations rise to protest. Man is, indeed, a peculiar creature.

It is to be expected that a number of other demented souls will strive to emulate this pathetic incident in the midst of a hurly-burly struggle for existence. Can such a contingency be successfully overcome? I believe that the time element is a vital factor in dealing with people of this type. In view of the facts, in the case mentioned above, it would not have been a difficult task to have effected a rescue, providing the equipment I have in mind was within reach. This is in no sense a criticism of the brave efforts of those who attempted a rescue, but rather a suggestion.

My equipment would consist of two small flagpoles about 30 feet in length; one net similar to those they use under wire-walkers and other acts at the circus, having a width of about 20 feet. In an emergency, similar to the one referred to, this net would be stretched from window to window of the floor below. It would then be attached to the poles with rings or sliding loops. Five husky men would be detailed to each pole. One man would be stationed in one of the windows with a life belt around him and his blackjack handy. On the floor above would be stationed two men on either side of the would-be suicide.

At a given signal the net would be shoved out to a distance of 20 feet. The men on either side of the victim would jump on the window casing and if he attempted to avoid the net at either end they would knock him into it. The man below with life belt attached would jump into net and stun victim, thereby making rescue a mere routine. This net would not be drawn taut at ends, thereby eliminating any possibility of victim bouncing out. Men stationed in windows would be secured by ropes. Other plans would of a necessity be arranged to suit the occasion.

Financing Latin America.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The encouragement given to expansion of American trade in Central and South American countries by financing through the Federal Export-Import Bank is very timely and laudable and is a recognition that the manifest destiny of this country is in the western hemisphere.

There are those who would make America the tail to the British kite and have us pull of chestnuts out of the fire for Britain, which alone seems no longer able to protect its far-flung empire from the hungry hordes in central Europe while at the same time continuing to exploit the natives in the colonies.

We should encourage our neighboring countries in this hemisphere to build a Pan American navy and army. This would keep our industry busy for years and would stabilize the South American governments and make this hemisphere independent politically as well as economically of Europe. The failure of the League of Nations was the absence of any police power. Unless we propose to do the fighting to protect both American continents, we should enable them to protect themselves. At the first opportunity we may expect the Fascist nations in Europe to take sides with one of the belligerents in an internal or external war in South America and turn it into another Spain.

If these American countries are given the proper encouragement and protection they will grow in population and commerce and absorb the surplus of American industry. At the same time the expansion of American industry will absorb much of the raw materials produced in Central and South America.

The time has come to realize that America is full grown and must cut the apron strings tying it to Great Britain.

Socialized Medicine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In regard to socialized medicine, allow me to say that since 1935 I have spent several hundred dollars for medical treatment and have received no permanent relief. My temporary improvement is due to advice of the laity. I went to X-ray specialists, bacteriologists and to lung and ear specialists. At no time was I ever given more than 8 to 10 minutes, and that was usually interrupted. Even when I went for my first examination the doctor was in a hurry. These physicians always took the time to send me their statements covering so-called professional services rendered.

I realize that the human body is both complex and complicated, and that the task of a doctor is not easy. My one and only complaint of the medical profession is their lack of interest. If a physician does what he can for me, even though there is no improvement whatever, I am as grateful to him and as willing to pay as if I had been cured. Notwithstanding my experience, I still believe there are a few capable and conscientious physicians, although it was my misfortune not to get in touch with this kind. Surely socialized medicine can do no less than was done in my case and that of many others, and if the kind of service offered by a clinic is put into effect the patient will not be annoyed to death with enormous bills coming in every month. Churchman And Contractor.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Politicians as logicians are somewhat naive. Mr. Roosevelt as head of the Democratic Party may do things that would be very much out of place for Mr. Roosevelt to do as President of the United States. And Mr. Ickes as a newspaper commentator may indulge in utterances that would be highly improper as Secretary of the Interior.

Such reasoning is reminiscent of a story I have read somewhere of a churchman who was also a contractor. As contractor, he would swear at his men if they did not do their work in a satisfactory manner. When word of this practice was heard, his bishop went to the churchman to reprove him for his conduct. Whereupon the churchman played the "Dr. Jeckyl and Mr. Hyde" act.

Said he, "I do not swear in my capacity as a churchman, but as a contractor."

But, said the bishop, "What will become of the churchman when the Devil gets the contractor?"

We shall not be surprised if in the coming campaign there is a full harvest of the Dr. Jeckyl and Mr. Hyde philosophy from Mr. Roosevelt's planting. VOX POP.

Protest From Texas.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We, the citizens of Texas, resent very much the attitude which your paper has taken toward our Governor's race here in Texas. We feel that you have not given justice to such an outstanding citizen as our Governor-elect.

Knowing W. Lee O'Daniel personally, as we do, prompts us to say that he is the most conscientious gentleman and businessman we have ever known. He and his family are a true representation of Christian life and are admired and respected by everyone.

"Catalytic Agent."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is easily understood why the editor of The Post should have received the meritorious Pulitzer award for editorial writings. Continuation of these inspiring and enlightning epistles, notably that in the issue of July 20 entitled "Catalytic Agent," would entitle him to additional awards.

Brilliant, sagacious and subtle was the writer and his title, the most appropriate heading ever accorded an editorial.

The author evidenced keen insight into the possibilities, yes, the probabilities, likely to grow out of the agreement of John L. Lewis and William Green on a common nenominator in Maryland's primary election, namely David J. Lewis. And, of course little Davey has become the catalytic agent.

There can be no difference in motive or goal of either of these labor leaders. The breach occurs only in their methods of procedure to obtain for the masses adequate remuneration for their services, which in turn will provide good housing, sufficient clothing, nourishing food and planned recreation. Now David J., for 50 years the champion of the worker, is the agent effecting labor catalysis.

We learned in chemistry studies that catalysis is a decomposition and new combination supposed to be affected by one substance acting upon a compound body, itself remaining unchanged.

No one fears that this Maryland senatorial candidate will ever change, but it is the universal hope of all true Americans that following labor's "decomposition," a new and greater labor "combination" will be effected, for in "union there is strength." EUGENE CASEY.

Court-Martial Publicity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I deem it a shame that the press feels that it is proper to print the proceedings of a military court martial concerning an officer who has served for 29 years in the army.

We have been regaled for days with unsavory charges about a certain officer, who, at the finish of the whole thing, is found guilty of nothing but peccadilloes, although the person charging the offenses was also in the service and certainly should not have been shown up as he was for what he is by a supposedly patriotic press.

I am a pacifist and have no personal interest in the military clique. But, after all, the professional soldiers have given their lives to the occupation of defending us all for pay and I know well that they will bear the brunt of the next war as they did of the last one.

Censorship should be imposed by every person from reporter up to editor and, if self-imposed, no article reflecting upon the personnel of our armed service would ever appear. CITIZEN.

Railroad Wages.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A belated cut for the highest paid railroad labor—stupidly imposed at the start of the Roosevelt depression—should point the way to immediate employment of 100,000 lower-paid maintenance men, to the reduction of relief rolls and maintenance of vanishing resources of both individuals and railroads.

Thus reduction becomes not an imposition by capital upon labor, but a signpost out of the Roosevelt depression for unemployed exrails and for railroad finances, without aid of politics. Men taking the cut will still be liberally paid—far above the average, and security of their jobs will be increased.

Why all the truculent resistance against a common-sense move? I know a half dozen well-paid railroad men whose income will be affected who, though they do not like the idea of surrendering any advantage gained, confess the logic of this action. E. G. BARR.

The Post Impressionist

The Young Gods.

IF the generation now in nurseries and grade schools have a future clouded in ambiguity and unmalleable in prospect, they have also in store one advantage which in after years they can turn gemlike in their hands catching the fleeting gleams of childhood on its facets. For as a unit they will have this teeming memory in common—theirs is a generation more endowed, more replete with those small images from which the young of all ages have drawn strange comfort, than any generation preceding them. No fledglings have ever begun life more surrounded by those singularly gay and quaint creatures that, inanimate in themselves, yet imbue their small owners with such ecstatic animation.

We of an earlier age passed youthful years under no such artful domination; we were content with a nondescript toy at holiday season, and that was all. I do recall that in my eighth year I wore my hair in an Alice-in-Wonderland mode held back by a red roach comb, but this was less by design than necessity, and not because the Tenniel drawings started a vogue.

Teddy bears came shortly afterward, inserting their pudgy bodies into countless little arms, but as they marched down the years they marked no epoch: they remain as they began, a standby, a fixture. But this new generation is different.

* * *

My own contribution to it could not imagine a home unequipped with these household goods, for Mickey Mouse is a contemporary of his and Popeye the sailorman is his blood brother. This bizarre pair has enjoyed a long reign within his own sphere from high chair to early schooldays and beyond. If Mickey shared his pillow, Popeye said good morning over a mug of milk. Advancing years brought signs of maturity. First-graders knew him resplendent in a sweatshirt with Mickey skating recklessly across his blazing orange chest.

As he climbed the steps of knowledge his insignia rose with him. He was voluble over his first writing lesson in ink—using a Mickey fountain pen; and a Mouse watch strapped to his wrist ticked the hours away. For time, so we are told by that mellifluous voice, marches on.

* * *

We passed unscathed through the Shirley Temple era and the Dionne deluge that followed. My lord being masculine was not interested. But he did add a few choice images of the dolorous Donald to his growing collection.

Then the Pigs descended with gusto banishing the mouse, the sailor and the lesser lights. The porcine pets moved in by trios and took possession; they piped at us from the dishes and fluted at us from all juvenile paraphernalia. His ties were painted with pigs, his caps and sweaters bore their quota; cowboy gauntlets were stamped with the prancing hooves of the piglets and his pajamas heaved under the onset of the plump trio. His teeth and hair were kept bright and shiny with Three Little Pig brushes, and those accouterments of school, i. e., pencilboxes and contents satchels and handkerchiefs, all underwent the miraculous change.

Then came a blessed lull.

The pigs' winsomeness began to pall. Also, my lord was growing older and a gradual masculine maturity made inroads. The wee images were packed away or passed on to other children. Again time was on the march.

* * *

Then whole-heartedly and in unconditional terms Washington surrendered to Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. Overnight the city bloomed with bewitching objects against which there was no sales resistance; littles girls jingled bracelets that dangled the tiny Seven as charms and wore ribbons and berets stamped with the magic forms. Small boys were cajoled into baths with soap dwarfs and toy shops displayed the enchanting princess and her stanch henchmen created in life-sizes, holding up chubby arms and enticing one with the softness of their bodies. But as phalanx after phalanx made no impression on my child, I breathed easily and thought we were out of the woods.

Then one day he accompanied me to a self-service grocery. Opening a huge refrigerated case in search of butter he saw them, huddled close together as if to keep each other warm: Snow White and the famous Seven on glasses filled with cottage cheese.

"Let's get them, Mom!"

"But none of us eat cottage cheese," I pointed out.

"Aw, come on, Mom! I could have a different glass every day, or," brightly, "different fruit juices for different glasses!"

"But we don't need glasses," I cried, trying to be calm.

"Just one then, Mom! You can't object to just one?" We were holding the door open, letting all the cold air out, and impatient customers were milling about, anxious for a chance at the icebox.

"Just one then, mind you!" I warned grimly.

He lifted them each in turn, scrutinizing them, weighing the delights of Doc in green against the charms of Happy in red. It was a momentous decision but he made it. He chose Snow White.

Next morning as I filled Snow White with orange juice I was staggered by the impact of a thought:

What if Disney should decide to film the old woman who lived in a shoe and had so many children she didn't know what to do?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

We Will Bomb, Too.

BARBAROUS it may be of the Spanish rebels and the Japanese to bomb cities, killing women and children in the process, but if the United States ever gets into another war American aviators will do the same thing. The planes will bomb the enemy's cities and towns without regard for the civilians of either sex or of whatever age, and the artillery will shell any objectives within range whose destruction seems to be worth the price of the ammunition.

The artillery will knock the steeples off churches overlooking the American positions because the enemy will be a perfidious and hypocritical lot who will not fail to use the steeples for observation posts, thus driving us to a painful but honorable remedy. The enemy will knock over our steeples, too, and that will be desecration, because our soldiers, of course, will have piously refrained from posting observers in them. Our soldiers will rather go without observation than place a spotter in the steeple of a sacred edifice and give the enemy justification for destroying the same. But yes.

OUR AVIATION will not start the game of bombarding civilian populations. The enemy will start that. He will bombard New York or San Francisco, perhaps, claiming that these are military objectives merely because they contain valuable ships, docks, munition plants and military stores and factories. In aiming at these things and the big bridges and waterworks and power plants he will use the principle of the shotgun, scattering his bombs over wide areas from great heights, most of which naturally will go wide of the intended marks and land on hospitals, orphanages and the tenements of the poor. The slaughter will be awful, and we will know very well that he is using the military objectives as an excuse for his barbarism and in time will be compelled to use his own methods against his own people.

A bleeding and demoralized civilian population is a great burden on a government which is trying to fight a war in the field and confine the brutality to soldiers. And attacks on the noncombatants in the back areas compel the government to withdraw planes and men from the war zone to defend the people. When the enemy does that to us, he will have a foul advantage unless we do the same to him. Our hearts will bleed for the pitiful civilians of his back areas, but their sufferings will be on the heads of their military masters. To equalize the war, we will have to make it necessary for him also to succor a bleeding and demoralized civilian population at the cost of energy and management needed at the front and make him also divert planes and pilots from the battle to defend his people.

WE WILL BOMB hospitals occasionally, too, but only because the enemy, with his cynical and inhuman cunning, will spot them close by his dumps of ammunition, forage and gasoline or right alongside his important railroad junctions, where troops and supplies and guns are switching. He will do this deliberately in order to put us on a spot, knowing that it will be impossible to shoot at these legitimate targets without hitting his sick and wounded. That will be tantamount to using the Red Cross on his military works or using his diseased and torn soldiers as human shields.

Well, he just can't get away with that, and if he is so vicious as to do this, then the best thing to do will be to throw away the rule book and fight him tomcat style in the belief that the only way to minimize and end the suffering is to give him the works at every opportunity. He will put out photographs of his charred hospitals, with rescuers poking among the ruins, to show his own people and the neutrals of the world what beasts we are, but he will neglect to say that the hospitals were inextricably set among objectives which we had every right to attack.

• • • •

HE WILL ATTACK our hospitals, too, especially the big ones on the Hudson and East Rivers or close by the rivers in New York City, and that will be studied and savage torture of the helpless; but he will be cunning enough to claim that he was aiming at big ships loading troops and military stores along the docks. That will be too thin for belief, but, we will call him a liar, pointing out that these hospitals are not that close to the important docks. But then he will say that the intensity of our antiaircraft fire kept his ships so high that they had to sacrifice accuracy for safety. He will say that it is up to us to move the hospitals, abandon the docks or ease up on the antiaircraft fire, and we will come to the point of realizing that there is no sense in arguing with him. He just isn't human.

In a fight with such an enemy a decent nation is hopelessly handicapped in attempting to observe the niceties of war. The sooner he is crushed the better, and he, the monster, will be telling the poor dupes of his population the same about us.

Mexico City.

THE AMERICAN NOTE regarding settlement for land expropriated from Americans by Mexico has caused a sensation here. As this is written, the government has not indicated the nature of its reply. Still, it can hardly be denied that the firmness of the note and its accompanying insistence on continued good relations between the two countries indicate to all concerned that Mexico must do something concrete in both the land and oil cases if she wishes to keep the friendship of the United States.

It must be said that little criticism, especially by the press, followed the reception of the note here. The attitude seems to be that the American Government has a right to insist on what is a firmly established principle in international law, and that the present regime in Mexico cannot afford to ignore a situation which might easily lead to an overwhelming strain on "good neighbor" ties. President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull have stuck by their non-intervention policy, even when the going was very rough; and this has brought compliments from the Mexican press.

Oil Question Seen Stalled By Cardenas.

THE OIL QUESTION is getting nowhere fast. President Cardenas has given orders for the evaluation of properties to start at once. The companies refused an offer to have a representative present at the evaluation proceedings. Strangely, too, the government has given up the idea of floating a bond issue of 100,000,000 pesos to help pay the debt, and it has given notice that no more money is to be collected for that purpose. Just what is behind all these moves is not yet clear, but it would seem that Cardenas has definitely decided not to strain the weakened credit of the nation by attempting to raise what at this particular time looms as a huge sum.

But land and oil are not the big news items in Mexico today. Most of the big stories of the past few weeks have centered about Lombardo Toledano, stormy secretary-general of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, familiarly known as the C. T. M.

Don Vicente had not yet returned from his trip to Europe and the United States when it became apparent that trouble would meet him more than halfway on his arrival home. A group of soldier deputies to the Congress of the nation accused Toledano of having made a speech in New York City wherein appeared phrases such as "a half million people died to bring about the realization of the Mexican revolution; yet there are still places in the country where peons are paid but a peso a day while the army mules are allowed four."

The deputies accused Toledano of trying to set the workers against the army and referred especially to his recent efforts at militarization of the C. T. M.

Labor Leader Charged Distortion Of Statement.

WHEN LOMBARDO returned, he immediately charged that his remarks in New York had been twisted by reporters who did not understand Spanish; and he followed this with scathing remarks about the "capitalistic press." His chief défense was that his "mule and peon" comparison was drawn from a study of minimum wages published under the name of President Abelardo Rodriguez in 1934.

Scarcely had this storm died down when Lombardo was in the thick of another. He told his followers that Gov. Yocupicio of Sonora was a secret friend of Cedillo; that he was opposed to the principles for which the workers were fighting, and that the "revolution has not yet come to Sonora." All this is in line with his campaign to remove Yocupicio from the ranks of presidential possibilities before 1940 rolls around.

The governor of Sonora replied in a public statement that Lombardo did not know what he was talking about. Yocupicio contended that agrarian and labor reform were proceeding according to the laws and constitution of the country; that President Cardenas knew he could count on Sonora to back him in any emergency, and the governor closed with words to the effect that "if the coming of the revolution to Sonora means that the state government and the workers must submit to domination by leaders from Mexico City, then most certainly the revolution has not arrived in Sonora."

Lombardo thereupon told his followers that Yocupicio was on the defensive. Still the C. T. M. leader was not satisfied in his baiting of the opposition. His next adventure found him sallying forth to attack the independent newspapers of the country. He contended that they had supported the Cedillo rebellion; that they consistently opposed the government; that they were against seeing labor advance itself; that they abused the rights which President Cardenas so generously allowed them.

Workers' Federation Asked to Indorse Gag.

IN ORDER TO check their "malicious misinformation," Lombardo called upon an assembly of the C. T. M. to approve a plan which would soon, he said, bring the papers to their knees. Those who worked for big companies were to ask their employers to refuse advertising to the papers; if the employers refused, strikes and walkouts should be employed. Those working within the papers themselves were to follow the same tactics. Truck drivers were to refuse to handle the papers, mail men should refuse to deliver them, railroad workers were to refuse them passage on trains; all workers affiliated with the C. T. M. were to refuse to buy the offending papers and certain magazines said to be their allies.

An indignant outcry from practically every section of Mexican society met these undemocratic proposals. All of the papers, without exception, published editorials in which they pointed out the folly of leading the workers into a situation which might well lose them all they had gained in 25 years of struggle.

To one who has followed Mexican affairs very closely for three years, it appears that the newspapers have all the better of the argument. They did not, as Lombardo charged, support the Cedillo rebellion. He was out of the country or he would have known that the government got 100 per cent press co-operation at that time. They have opposed the government, so far as this writer can see, only when its measures were opposed to what they believed were the best interests of the country. Certainly there has been criticism, but it has never reached the heights of most of the things that American papers have said about Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Disputed Borderland.

Paris, July 29.

WHAT little history most of us have learned is a very poor preparation indeed to understand the history of these times. We came out of school thinking that the significant story of mankind is the story of the foundation of the British, French and American nations upon the traditions of the classical and Christian culture. Only a few specialists ever acquired a knowledge of the history of that great mass of peoples who lie beyond the old boundaries of the Roman Empire, that is to say east of the Rhine and north of the Danube. Few of us know anything about the history of Russia, or Bohemia, Hungary, or even of the ancient history of Prussia and the German principalities.

Yet it is in this region which we have never learned to understand, in this region where for centuries the Germans and the Slavs have been in contact and in conflict, that the World War was generated. And it is in this same region that the great drama of our day is being played. We are the spectators of, and in varying degrees unhappily the reluctant participants in, a conflict which is as old as Europe, a conflict due to a collision between Germans fighting their way toward the East and of Slavs infiltrating toward the West. For the time being the Germans march under the banner of National Socialism. But long before the philosophy and the program of the Nazis were dreamed of, the Germans were marching toward the same objectives and as a result there are German colonies extending all the way to the Black Sea. And long before there was communism, Russia was pushing its way into Central Europe. In historical perspective Nazism is a peculiarly active manifestation of pan-Germanism as communism is of pan-Slavism.

BETWEEN the two masses, the Germans and the Russians, each inflamed by a religion as warlike and as fanatical as that of early Mahometanism, there lies a belt of mixed peoples extending from the Baltic Sea to the Mediterranean—Letts, Latvians, Estonians, Lithuanians, Poles, Ruthenians, Jews, Czechs, Slovaks, Hungarians, Rumanians, Croats, Serbs, Bulgars, Greeks, Albanians, Turks and also Germans who are affiliated by language with Germany, but by sympathy with the western nations.

These peoples are so entangled with each other that they cannot be separated into compact national groups; they are so crowded that they are engaged in a fierce struggle for existence, and they are so little able to grasp the western ideas of citizenship in a state under equal laws that much of their history is the story of how the persecuted became in time the persecutors and were, in turn, overcome and again persecuted.

• • • •

THE MAIN DRAMA of Europe today is the effort of the Nazis to make themselves the masters of this borderland region between Germany and Russia. The choice offered to the peoples of the borderland is, indeed, a difficult one. It is, as they see it, a choice between becoming the vassals of Germany and of undergoing a Bolshevik revolution

For by and large, particularly in Poland, in Hungary and in Rumania, there has survived into the modern age a feudal system with great landlords and a desperately impoverished and in part landless peasantry. The system is ready to collapse; the contagion and example of Russia tend to precipitate the collapse. That is why the ruling classes in these countries are above all other things anti-Bolshevik. For them the Communist danger is a real one, because they know that underneath them in their own countries there is a seething discontent. Against this danger the Nazis seem to offer some protection; they promise to leave the feudal classes the possession of their property and their titles. But for this protection the price asked is tremendous: It is nothing less than the surrender of national independence and the acceptance of the position of vassals under a liegelord, Adolf Hitler.

• • • •

IN ALL THIS the position of Czechoslovakia is exceptional, one might say unique. For the Czechs have carried out the social reform which was necessary to avert a social revolution. They have legislated feudalism out of existence. That is why the Czechs alone are not afraid to deal with Russia; the Communist propaganda does not threaten them, because within their own country there is substantial social justice and no serious social discontent. And that is why the Czechs alone do not have to seek the protection of the Germans and are prepared to resist them.

The national independence of the Poles, Hungarians, and Rumanians rests upon a feudal society which is doomed either to destruction from within or to mastery from without, but the Czechs have a free society based on a reasonably fair distribution of property, and though they are threatened from without they are strong within

• • • •

THE AWFUL CHOICE offered to these peoples is due to the fact that in the 20 years during which their national independence was guaranteed by France, they failed to carry out the internal reforms which would have perpetuated their independence. Only then would they have become what they were intended to be—a borderland of free nations to keep the peace between Germany and Russia by keeping them apart. When Hitler rearmed Germany and occupied the Rhineland, the period of their protected independence came to an end. Now they have to decide their fate for themselves, and only those who, like the Czechs, are prepared to help themselves can count on any help from the west.

The Saratoga season is on. Gotcher spasaing partner?

Ex-Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York has recovered, after quite a battle, an anchor chain link from the battleship Maine, sunk in Havana Harbor in 1898. Just why Jimmy was so concerned over it seems to puzzle some people. It's just possible that it may all be explained by the fact Jimmy has little to do now except remember the Maine.

Of course it may be that Mr. Walker is just getting together a few birthday gifts and in this case is thinking of using it in a cake for Judge Seabury.

Commodity Price Control

By Mark Sullivan.

Government's Role.

DURING the past few days prices in the Stock Exchange have engaged the attention of persons who interpret the Stock Exchange as a barometer of business generally. Beginning on June 20 there was a strikingly sharp rise. Beginning a few days ago, there has been a period of backing and filling. However, the bulk of the rise since June 20 remains. This rise continues to be the phenomenon of dominating importance.

The country turns to Washington for light. It can be said that official Washington likes the rise, beams over it. Official Washington had been hoping for it. Some of official Washington had taken steps to start the rise. Practically all official Washington thinks the rise is an omen of better business, greater volume of activity in manufacturing and selling. With this view, practically all leaders of business agree. It is expected that industry will be better during the present third quarter of the year, and still better during the final three months. And most observers think business will continue to improve during 1939.

• • • •

OMITTING everything about prediction, there is, in the present status of business and prices, a strange condition.

Prices—Prices of commodities, that is, as distinct from prices of securities—consist of two elements. One element is the commodities themselves, the conditions affecting them. The other element is money, quantity of money. The interaction of the two upon each other makes prices.

As respects practically every commodity in the world, one would say prices are higher than conditions warrant. The price of practically every commodity is kept up by one artificial device or another, by some kind of stilt. The price of practically every commodity would go down if left to itself, to natural forces.

Prices of farm crops, from cotton to cabbage, are kept up by Secretary Wallace. He keeps almost frantically busy at it. Let the price of any farm crop start down and Mr. Wallace comes galloping in with Government money to keep it up. Wheat tends to drop—and Mr. Wallace rushes in with at least four separate stilts. With some $12,000,000 he bought, up to July 21, about 3,000,000 barrels of wheat products, flour and the like. As another stilt he announces that he will reduce the acreage of wheat permitted to be planted the coming season by about 40 per cent, from 81,000,000 acres this year to 55,000,000 next year. As a gift to farmers, to compensate them for their reduced acreage, he makes direct cash payments.

Similarly, as to practically every farm crop, by one device or another, Mr. Wallace keeps prices higher than they would otherwise be. Cabbage drops to $8 a ton in North Carolina—and Mr. Wallace rushes in to buy many carloads at $9 a ton. He has bought potatoes, butter, rice, cotton, cotton seed oil and some 20 other commodities. Lately the Administration has bought $10,000,000 worth of ready-made clothing. All to keep prices up.

• • • •

WHAT OUR Government does about farm crops, other governments do about various commodities. Several governments practice or sanction limitation of tin, rubber, copper and some other commodities, so as to keep prices up. Some private corporations keep prices up, though recently the steel industry has dropped prices somewhat.

In short, the prices of nearly all commodities are by artificial means kept higher than natural conditions would make them. If the artificial conditions were removed, or broke down, presumably prices would go lower.

• • • •

THE OTHER element in price is quantity of money, including credit. Increase in quantity of money and credit means, ordinarily, higher prices for commodities. Money and credit are in control of the Administration, and the Administration so maneuvers them as to increase them, and thus keep prices high. The Administration reduces the gold value of the dollar from 100 to 59. That makes each former dollar now become $1.67. The Administration raises the price it pays for gold from $20 an ounce to $35 an ounce. That makes what was once $20 now $35.

So, we have Government so manipulating money as to make prices high. In addition, we have Government acting directly on commodities so as to make the prices high—buying them up, inducing owners not to sell, preventing the creation of additional quantities of commodities.

On the other hand we have practically all the natural conditions working for lower prices.

What will be the outcome of this extraordinary situation is anybody's guess.

Good Neighbors

By Barnet Nover

United States And Latin America.

THE ESTABLISHMENT in the Department of State of a Division of Cultural Relations marks a new departure in American governmental policy.

In their individual and private capacities, Americans have certainly not been behindhand in establishing contacts with other nations and other peoples. This has been due to our cosmopolitan origin, our unquenchable curiosity as a people as to the way other peoples live; and to the wanderlust urge which has made Americans the most ubiquitous of travelers.

Whatever the reasons, the fact is undeniable that we have never been isolated culturally from the rest of the world as we have tried to be politically. Yet there have been certain blind spots in our attitude towards the culture and civilizations of the nations outside our borders. In contrast to a deep and abiding interest in Europe, we have, in large measure, tended to ignore Latin America.

The civilization and culture of the nations to our south has been for most Americans a closed book. On the other hand Latin America like so many other parts of the world have never received a clear, undistorted picture of our ways, our institutions, our culture.

• • • •

IT IS UNDERSTOOD that the new Division of Cultural Affairs will have as its primary aim, for the time being, the improvement of cultural relations and intellectual co-operation between the United States and Latin America. And in Dr. Ben M. Cherrington it will have a chief who has shown an abiding interest and marked ability to translate that aim into reality.

The "good neighbor" policy marches ahead. Despite difficulties with Mexico over the question of compensation for American properties expropriated by the Cardenas regime, our relations with Latin America are probably better now than they ever have been.

The suspicions that were once so prevalent in those countries concerning the policies of the "Colossus of the North," the fears of "Yankee imperialism," have subsided to a very remarkable degree during the past few years. That is why there will be far more disposition now than there would have been, say, a decade ago, to accept at its face value the denials by American officials that the new division in the department of State is designed to spread propaganda and to accept as valid the statement that its purpose will be purely to foster cultural relations and intellectual co-operation.

ONE VERY SIGNIFICANT proof of the receding fears and subsiding suspicions of the United States and its policy is to be found in the decline in Latin-American membership in the League of Nations.

When the League came into being, the other nations of this hemisphere did not follow our example. We stayed out. They, with the exception of Mexico, whose pride was hurt by not having been included among the list of those originally invited to join, went in. In the course of time some of the Latin-American nations dropped out—Costa Rica in 1925, Brazil in 1926 and Paraguay in 1935. On the other hand, Argentina, which had remained aloof for years, became active again some years ago and Mexico accepted membership.

But of late the roster of Latin-American nations that have withdrawn from the League has grown considerably. To Brazil, Costa Rica and Paraguay have been added Nicaragua, Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, Chile and Venezuela. Thus of the 20 Latin-American countries that at one time or another have been members of the Geneva organization only 11 are active members now.

• • • •

WHAT IS BEHIND this exodus from Geneva?

When the League came into being the Latin-American world regarded it as an institution that could be doubly useful to them. In the first place, it might serve as an offset to the United States, which some of those nations then feared and distrusted, and, secondly, it had a possible usefulness as a means of safeguarding the security of each nation.

Now during the last few years two developments have occurred which have tended to reduce the League's importance to Latin-American nations. In the first place, no one looks to Geneva any longer as an institution immediately capable of safeguarding any nation's security; and in the second place, the League is no longer needed as an offset to the United States, in view of the friendly relations that now exist between this country and its neighbors.

• • • •

ALL THIS is flattering to the United States and a tribute to the "good neighbor" policy. And yet, to be perfectly realistic, the fact must not be ignored that the development is not without its ominous overtones for the United States.

The weaker the League becomes and the more the Latin-American nations feel that it is useless to belong to it and pay dues to it, the more they are likely to look to the United States as the principal barrier against outside aggression.

It will be said, of course, that under the Monroe Doctrine that is the role that we are determined to play anyway. Maybe so, but the fact remains that as collective security crumbles away elsewhere the protection of this hemisphere against outside aggressions becomes more difficult. In other words, while peace in the Americas is a noble and worth-while ideal, it is only part of the larger problem of establishing peace in the world.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Alarmed View.

Most any idea can be rationalized and every situation—whatever it is—holds the basis for some alarm. A friend may have a headache and you would be within the bounds of reason, at least, in warning him that typhoid fever often starts with an aching of the head. A friend may start across the street and if you warn him that men crossing streets are sometimes struck by automobiles, your idea and advice certainly would have foundation. It is true that the chance and the gamble can't be taken from life and affairs.

But if no chance was ever taken, progress in all directions would certainly stop, and if any movement ever started without kinks and wrinkles and some outlook for a rocky way, it hasn't come to public attention. In all of this, we are thinking of the gloomy and alarmed view that Representative Edith Nourse Rogers has taken toward the Executive orders of June 24. The statement of Representative Rogers, who is the ranking Republican member of the House Civil Service Committee, was carried in The Post Thursday morning.

The Representative has concluded that "the more I study the order and the more I discuss it with civil service authorities, the more inclined I am to the conclusion that it is only a 'yes, but' order." In an ensuing analysis, the Massachusetts Representative sees the orders as calculated to perpetuate the present Administration, as a means of adding more $50 and $100 soup to the Jackson Day dinners, as a means of paying off the Democratic campaign expenses, as affording the President a false credit for extending the merit system and as a patented device for sustaining favorable officeholders in their jobs.

'Loopholes.'

The fact that the President waited five years to issue the orders, which were called for by his party platform and desired by the country, or at least by all true believers in the merit system. She wondered why the orders didn't go into effect before February 1, or, more realistically, why the application was delayed until February 1, after the elections.

May we say that the President has long contended that he wanted an extension of the merit system, wanted it extended "upward, outward and downward." This column never has been convinced, on the other hand, that the people generally wanted the merit system extended. There have been many faithful and persevering friends of the merit system all along—but to say that the country as a whole has lost sleep over it is to delude oneself in sweet dreaming. Of late, the merit movement has gained by leaps and bounds, but this hasn't been the trend from of old.

And it would have been from a working standpoint, an impossibility almost for the orders to have taken immediate effect. The technical difficulties in suddenly moving approximately 75,000 persons from one employment status to another in complete reverse would be great, to say the least. As crippled for funds and facilities as is the Civil Service Commission, it is asking much for them to do the job by February 1, or on a bare seven months' notice.

More Pessimism.

Then there is the view toward the noncompetitive examinations, whereby a worker who doesn't pass may still be retained in the service (without civil service status) if so recommended by the agency head. The Representative sees all manner of political possibility in this case and figures that if the person has properly shaken down toward the war chest and the Jackson Day dinner soup, all will be well with him despite his demonstrated unfitness.

Indeed, the idea can be rationalized, and one can be filled with gloom—but so can one be pessimistic when his friend starts across a street where fast moving vehicles are threatening. Undoubtedly, there is a chance of harm, but in every case, almost, the game warrants the candle. Sometime, somehow, at whatever immediate hazard, the merit system in Government will be extended. It will have to start somewhere, and with more wrinkles and kinks on its face than are wanted. The fact that it starts is the important thing. The kinks can be taken out later.

We suspect that additional steps will come almost immediately with the reconvening of Congress. The Ramspeck bill, which would further extend the merit system, is to be heard from, with plenty of backing. The picture isn't dismal. About all that is needed is enough public opinion to make spoils-Congressmen play ball instead of patronage politics. Executive orders can't do this. But the voters can.

Robert Shosteck writes in that the Capital Hiking Club—which appeals to Federal workers and of which he is trail leader, goes on a hike tomorrow along Skyland, in Virginia. The club was organized by and for Federal employes and has a long program for the next month. You can contact Shosteck at 1121 Orren street northeast.

Girl Drops Ring in Field; Chef Finds It in Potato

Modern Legend Is Picturized At the Capitol

Warner Baxter Starred as Millionaire Who Seeks Happiness.

"I'LL GIVE A MILLION." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Cesare Zavarttini and Giaci Mondaini, adapted to the screen by Boris Ingster and Milton Sperling, starring Warner Baxter, with Marjorie Weaver, Peter Lorre, Jean Hersholt, John Carradine, J. Edward Bromberg, Lynn Bari, Fritz Feld, Sig Rumann, Christian Rub, Paul Harvey, Frank Reicher, Lillian Porter, Luis Alberni, Rafaela Ottiano, Georges Renavent and Stanley Andrews. Directed by Walter Lang. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Woven around the modern legend of the incognito millionaire, looking for a real friend, is "I'll Give a Million." But done with considerable finesse by a highly able cast, it proves up as amiable and smooth entertainment.

Warner Baxter again plays Warner Baxter—and very commendably. He's the millionaire who's too, too fed up with it all, who finds malice always at his elbow, hypocrisy crouching at the door, greed ever underfoot—and all masked as friendship. In other words, everybody he knows gets in his hair.

Dame circumstance gives Warner a break when, after he dives off his yacht to rescue a tramp, the yacht steams on. Warner swims for the shore with the ragged rescue-ee. Here begins a new life among the dregs of the Riviera. Beauty rears its sex-y head in the form of an American girl working with a circus.

But the rescued tramp goes to a newspaper with the story of a mysterious millionaire who said he'd give a million francs (come to think of it, that isn't so much now) to anyone who'd be kind to him while he was disguised as a tramp. There is an epidemic of kindness to tramps on the Riviera. These sequences, showing the good citizens showering sweetness and light upon astounded bums, are enough to make any picture worth while—the top in good humored satire.

Fine Actors in Cast.

Some of the finest character actors in Hollywood, or in the world, for that matter, enrich the production. We mean Peter Lorre, John Carradine, Luis Alberni, Jean Hersholt and J. Edward Bromberg.

Lorre and Carradine are nothing less than superb as a pair of tramps. Lorre is a little lost dumpling of a man who can think of nothing but the good things of life so far beyond his reach. When he foozles the editor of the Riviera newspaper, he insists on a diet of lobster thermidor and champagne. As for Carradine, he is a gangling picture of tattered swank, mannered to the nines while keeping an eye on the gutter for stray cigarette ends. Some day we hope Hollywood will give Lorre or Carradine full scope for their peculiar talents.

The love interest is played acceptably by Marjorie Weaver.

Ranking right along with the other players is a chimpanzee named Darwin. As a chimp, Darwin is a good actor. He's an expert in jiu jitsu, too, and you must never miss seeing him wrestle with a sailor.

A Pete Smith short describes the development and work of lifesavers. It's very well done, with the proper admixture of typical Pete Smith comedy. A comedy cartoon, "The Last Indian," and the newsreel fill out the celluloid program.

Andrews Sisters Score.

The Andrews Sisters, a trio of swingstresses, made a sound and strong audience hit. They wound up a group of popular numbers with their favorite, "Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen."

Astonishingly clever arrangements were featured by harmonica artists Jim and Mildred Mulcay. They actually gave a new and delightful twist to "Smoke Gets In My Eyes," and their playing of Benny Goodman's version of "Tiger Rag" was another honey.

"Slim" Timblin serves comedy in the rowdy-dowdy manner. The Five Reillys are a flock of smart and agile young tap dancers. The Three Sophisticated Ladies turned out to be a trio of acrobatic tomboys with a good idea of humor.

The Capitol Orchestra plays "Mignon" in both regular and swing time. The swing sector of the audience seemed to like it hugely, the others probably found its redeeming feature in the work of the orchestra's first violin.

Metropolitan

"GANGS OF NEW YORK." Republic's picturization of the book by Herbert Asbury, adapted to the screen by Wellyn Totman, Sam Fuller and Charles Francis Royal, featuring Charles Bickford, Ann Dvorak, Allan Baxter, Wynne Gibson, Harold Huber, Willard Robertson, Maxie Rosenbloom, Charles Trowbridge, John Wray, Jonathan Hale and Fred Kohler. Directed by James Cruze. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud.

Should the rain let up and another dry, hot spell set in, you might go down to the Metropolitan to get cooled off. Charles Bickford playing a dual role, both parts desperately daring, pistols banging and cops narrowing their eyes at gangsters, and all, is quite enough to bring a nice-sized chill to any spine.

Mr. Bickford returns after having been away for awhile and gives his assignment a dosage of virility and vicious underplaying that is agreeable.

Rife with gangsters named "Tombstone" and "Dapper," and "Slapsie" Rosenbloom to boot, is "Gangs of New York." Their technique is questionable to one who has studied astutely the various gangster films depicting the method of rubbing-out a guy that has become popular in the best mob pictures. These mugs talk too much and do too little. There is action, however, and possibly enough blood-shedding to satisfy the less exacting.

Bickford is Rocky, gang chieftain, and also a copper who sets out to liquidate Rocky's mob. When he is a copper his girl is Ann Dvorak; when he is a thug his moll is Wynne Gibson. Both are alluring. Ann and the copper half win. Right is right, but how about getting a hero in a tight spot just once and letting him stay there and not go around triumphing over obstacles so persistently?

The Three Stooges, added attraction, come through with an item about gorillas. Don Bestor and his band dream some mellow tunes, the best being Bestor's stint on the vibraharp. Joan Merrill sings purringly. Newman's Technicolor travelogue is far better than such sugar-coated geography lessons usually are. It shows India's choice beauty spots and the narrator doesn't gush.

In the newsreel you may see, if you wish, the New York suicide leap in rather ghoulish detail.

"LOVE FINDS ANDY HARDY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a screen play by William Ludwig, from the stories by Vivien R. Bretherton, based on characters created by Aurania Rouverol, featuring Mickey Rooney, Lewis S. Stone and Judy Garland, with Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Lana Turner, Ann Rutherford, Mary Howard, Gene Reynolds, Betty Ross Clarke, Marie Blake, George Breakston and Raymond Hatton. Directed by George B. Seitz. Previewed Tuesday, July 26.

Hilariously funny, when need be, and at times fortified with scenes of genuine emotional strength, "Love Finds Andy Hardy," currently on view at Loew's Palace, is as completely satisfying a screen entertainment as has come along in a month of blue moons.

BELL.

At base, of course, this picture, with Mickey Rooney in the pivotal role, is uproarious comedy. It is a serious social predicament in which Master Andy Hardy finds himself as Christmas approaches. There is the matter of that big Christmas Eve dance, the necessity of having an automobile in which to transport the lady of his choice to it, and other complicating circumstances to harass a young man who feels that he must "steal the show" or not attend at all.

Having paid a $12 deposit on a rickety old jallopy, the remaining $8 proves a bit of a stymie. Matters grow worse when Andy's girl can't go to the hop and "Beezy" agrees to assume the financial burden of the overdue eight bucks, provided Andy will pay a little attention to Cynthia, thus shielding her from more predatory amenities and saving her for Beezy when his out-of-town holiday shall have ended. The upshot of all this is that Andy finds himself finally the ardent swain of too many "women" and otherwise nonplussed by the turn of events when Beezy falls in love with another girl where he is visiting and calls the vital $8 deal off.

The Judge Understands.

Judge Hardy's understanding intervention has something to do with the final adjustment of all this, but not half so much as Betsy, the youngster visiting next door, who exercises an acute feminine intuition and unsnarls the complex tangle of Andy's social debacle by pinch-hitting herself as the "sensation" of the evening at the dance, and then turning Andy back to his own girl next morning.

These adolescent problems and their precarious solution comprise the major movement of the play. There are, however, other elements of dramatic appeal interjected from time to time that lend "Love Finds Andy Hardy" a more substantial body than most comedies. Judge Hardy learns his lesson of respect for the rising generation from a small lad he has penalized in court, who manages to get a "life and death" message through to the judge's wife over his home-made radio set when all other means of communication have failed; there are, too, scenes between father and son that are fine object lessons in the relationship that should exist between parents and their children. Strengthening all of the action is an overtone of actuality that makes the home life of an average American family seem very real.

The picture has been cast with the same fidelity to type that has characterized all of the releases in the Hardy Family series. Lewis S. Stone continues his perfect work as the paterfamilias and Fay Holden is seen again as his wife. Cecilia Parker is the older sister, who encounters difficulty in asserting her authority over her brother Andy, and Judy Garland is the little visitor next door, too young to "belong," but too wise not to. Lana Turner and Ann Rutherford complete the roster of Andy's feminine perplexities.

Mickey and Judy Costar.

Mickey Rooney compounds an almost undeniable claim to individual stardom by his work in this subject, which is preponderantly his. He is master of all the tricks of timing and expression of the born comedian and is no less competent in his serious moments with his father. Lana Turner also steps up a rung by the excellence of her performance as the emotional young redhead whose every appearance brings havoc to her "boy friends." But it is Judy Garland who really shares honors with Mickey. Three songs have been written into the film for her by Gordon and Revel and Roger Edens and all, no doubt, eventually will work their way into the hit class. Miss Garland's is a defeatist's role, but she plays it triumphantly.

Gene Reynolds, as the juvenile radio wizard, easily leads those in the minor roles, among whom may be mentioned such veterans as Betty Ross Clarke, Raymond Hatton, Marie Blake and George Breakston, the vacillating Beezy. As much productional and directional care has been expended upon this release as upon any of M-G-M's avowed "A" subjects.

The shorter auxiliaries are on a par with the feature in merit. "Tracking the Sleeping Death" is an M-G-M "Miniature" after the manner of "Yellow Jack," with Gilbert Emery as the courageous Dr. Bruce, who ran down the source of contagion of the dreaded sleeping sickness in Africa, and "Surf Heroes" is a Pete Smith recital of the bravery of the Coast Guards at Santa Monica, where the breakers run high.

Appears as Snobbish Daughter

ANITA LOUISE

one of the cinema's most attractive young blonde actresses, who does ample justice to an unsympathetic role with Kay Francis in "My Bill," screen feature of the week at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Bonita Granville, Bobby Jordan and Dickie Moore are Miss Francis' other children in this domestic comedy drama.

Dickie Moore Saves Day for Household in Family Crisis.

"MY BILL." Warner Brothers picturization of a screen play by Vincent Sherman, adapted from Tom Barry's stage play of "Courage," starring Kay Francis, with Bonita Granville, Anita Louise, John Litel, Bobby Jordan, Dickie Moore, Elisabeth Risdon, Maurice Murphy, Bernice Pilot, Sidney Bracey, Helene Phillips Evans and John Ridgely. Directed by John Farrow. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

To ZaSu Pitts is entitled the credit for packing the Earle Theater to the last inch of standing-room space yesterday. The distinguished Hollywood comedienne, appearing in person as headliner of the vaudeville portion of the bill, is assisted by Cliff Hall in an interval of dialogue that is as amusing as Miss Pitts always is on the screen.

It is not a pretentious act that Miss Pitts and Mr. Hall present. Neither is it one of those fleeting appearances devoted to an extravagant line of patter about the marvels of life in the studios or the glories of Southern California. On the contrary, it is a reasonably long interlude of witty "cross-fire" that affords ample opportunity to appraise the superlative endowments of an artiste who is as genuine as she is droll. Throughout the persiflage the celebrated Pitts hands wave a humorous accompaniment to her spoken words and at frequent periods there emerges from the dialogue that imperishable, "Oh, de-e-ar me," which, in the eyes—or perhaps it should be ears—of the audience would suffice in itself. The turn is concluded with a recitative, "Hands," by Miss Pitts, which at one point remarks that hers might as well be Sally Rand's fans!

As a matter of fact, Miss Pitts' hands are among the most graceful in Hollywood and are only an incidental asset to the comic genius of a star who scored a tremendous personal triumph yesterday afternoon. Mr. Hall, by the way, is an extremely able foil, who seeks to elude, rather than steal, the spotlight.

Ace Supporting Bill.

The entire stage bill at the Earle this week is above par. Jack Lenny and the platinum Statler Twins open the proceedings with some tricky tap dancing that immediately caught the fancy of the crowd and were followed by Nelson's Novelettes, a puppet act that is decidedly out of the ordinary. The marionettes are manipulated in full view of the audience and while only one performs at a time, each scored an instant hit—a Chinese juggler, a clown in the Pagliacci manner, a monkey trapeze performer and a drunk.

Corinna Mura is a singer of Spanish songs of the first rank and an equally proficient guitarist in her own accompaniments. Familiar to radio audiences, she was no less successful in winning the approval of those in attendance in such numbers yesterday. Juanita and Her Champions close the bill in an exhibition of roller skating feats on a hazardously small floor area. Jo Lombardi and the orchestra are on the stage this week to background the swiftly paced program.

"My Bill," in which Kay Francis appears as the mother of two obstreperous daughters, an over-stuffed adolescent boy and a faithful small son, on the screen, is another study in domestic upheaval that is thoroughly unsound psychologically, but amusing, nevertheless. Miss Francis is cast as the widow of a man she married to insure her financial independence. Having no "money sense" of her own, she soon dissipates the family fortune and her household is made the prey of scheming relatives who oust her from her home and impugn the parenthood of her youngest child—the heroic little shaver from whom the picture derives its name.

It is Bill who finally brings things out right side up through an unbelievable series of juvenile adventures in the "big business" of selling newspapers and making friends with both the president of the bank, who had loved his mother, and the neighborhood termigant, Mrs. Crosby. Muriel, Gwen and Reggie, who have deserted their mother in favor of Aunt Caroline, a shrew of the first order, are taught the error of their ways by the rigid discipline imposed upon them by Aunty and are glad to crawl back to Mother when Bill inherits all of Mrs. Crosby's wealth.

Dickie Moore Gets Tough.

A superficial and counterfeit drama, "My Bill" still is skillfully executed in several of its departments. Bonita Granville, Anita Louise and Bobby Jordan are properly contemptible children—which means that they play their parts well—and Elisabeth Risdon towers above the rest of the cast as the acidulous aunt. Miss Francis is, perhaps, as convincing as any actress could be in a character so faultily sketched by the authors. John Litel, as the banker, is similarly handicapped by a role it would be pleasant to believe, if that were possible.

The most important figure in the play, of course, is Dickie Moore in the title part. Master Dickie, at the age of 12, really ought to be one of the "Dead End" kids. He is a tough and slangy little fellow, as Bill, and tells off his elders in a way that would earn him a sound drubbing in real life. In his admiration of his mother, however, he is Little Lord Fauntleroy himself—and you love him for that.

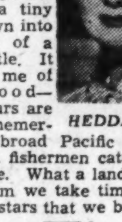
The supplementary screen attractions include the Paramount News, "Mechanix Illustrated," a bit of Technicolor science, and Charlie Chase in "Many Sappy Returns," a comedy of taxicabs.

It is ZaSu Pitts' fault, not Miss Francis', that the Earle is presenting five de luxe performances today.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 29.—After finishing my weekly stint, I motored to Santa Barbara to week-end with San Francisco friends, the Samuel Knights. He's one of those legal lights who keep people out of jail. Relaxed through orange groves and rolling fields. Watched a tiny cloud blown into the shape of a huge castle. It reminded me of Hollywood—most of ours are just as ephemeral. The broad Pacific shore was lined with fishermen catching their dinner free. What a land of plenty! How seldom we take time to thank our lucky stars that we belong to it.



HEDDA HOPPER

I arrived in time for a huge cocktail party given for artists and the musical committee for the Summer Festival in the Santa Barbara Bowl. Nice to know California is becoming musically Bowl conscious—Hollywood, Santa Barbara, Marine County, outside of San Francisco. This one was originated and is run by Mrs. Power Symington, who was present. As Maud Fay she was known as one of our greatest Wagnerian prima donnas.

Up in her neck of the woods, out of 40,000 population, 10,000 are members of the Musical Chest. You can join for 10 cents. No reserved boxes or seats. The members hear the finest music and singers for a quarter. It costs nonmembers $3. Her slogan is, "If you don't like music, don't contribute. We won't need your money. If you do, give what you can afford."

I chatted with Mrs. David Gray, who whips down to Hollywood Bowl twice a week, motoring home after concerts. Her father-in-law was one of the men who loaned Henry Ford a bit of change, which was returned—in millions. She's one of Santa Barbara's greatest benefactors.

Among others there were Alma Spreckels, who's making the Samarkand Hotel, which she bought, into a world-famous all-year-round resort.

And Katharine Harvey, daughter of founder of Harvey Houses, who made eating between trains a pleasure instead of catch-as-can scrambles.

Louise Burke, sister of Carton, who helps keep our horse-racing in the straight and narrow.

And over all of these I felt the spirit of Marie Dressler, who spent so many happy hours among all these people, who were her friends.

Then after a bite of dinner, on to the Bowl. The stage flanked on either side by live-oak trees. Below, in the valley, was the rebuilt City of Santa Barbara, which had been ravaged a few years back by one of our better earthquakes. Only a few lights were discernible, owing to faulty visibility. Music lovers called it "Scotch mist." Fog, supposed to be bad for the throat, did just the reverse for Mme. Jeritza, who sang better than she has in many moons. She looked a picture in ashes-of-roses chiffon, ermine coated to the heels. Only her sun-kissed hands looked as though they belonged to another person. Adolph Bolm's ballet was charming.

Evening gowns covered with horse blankets, giving our balmy climate a black eye. How I envied a couple sitting near me, lost to everything but music and themselves. From their faces, you knew they'd highlighted their lives with music. Haven't we all? But some of us forget.

After the concert, on to Alexis Zalstem-Zalessky's for Russian supper, hot spiced wine and vodka. While feasting my eyes on Mrs. Stanley McCormack's pearls, I listened to Chinese music—yes, that's what they called it. Here I met a broth of a woman who turned out to be Mary Craig. She was the architect for Mrs. Jesse Lasky's new home in Brentwood.

Anny May Wong was there, as were Mrs. Chester Fritz and the Jimmy Broderos, who have solved their problem of living by doing over a house about to be torn down, for which they pay—a dollar a month. You may remember Mme. Zelessky was Mrs. Leopold Stokowski. She is one of the most fascinating women I ever met.

Columbia

"FAST COMPANY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a book by Marco Page, adapted to the screen by Page and Harold Tarshis, starring Melvyn Douglas, supported by Florence Rice, Sheppard Strudwick, Mary Howard, Claire Dodd, Louis Calhern, George Zucco and Nat Pendleton. Directed by Edward Buzzell. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

If this could have come in on the upbeat of its cycle, instead of the down, and if its tempo lived up a bit more to the title, it might have been considerable more fun. As it stands, it is better than average entertainment.

As a matter of fact and honesty, we think it would have seemed pretty funny if there had been a larger and more appreciative audience at the matinee performance we caught. Now we're not sheep-like and don't just follow, willy-nilly, in our enjoyment, but we got sort of tired laughing all by ourself at some lines we thought really funny.

Just which cycle is this picture part of? Why that school of domestic and detecting bliss that the Thin Man and his wife launched so successfully. This time, the gentleman is in the rare book business, but makes more out of his sideline, recovering stolen books and collecting rewards from insurance companies.

Wifie is his secretary and they do so love each other. They also love a young friend who had been railroaded to jail by a rare book competitor and who is charged with the murder of his railroader upon his release from jail—so husband and wifie go to work. Of course, the police are completely helpless without them.

The mystery isn't half bad, at that, what with two murders, kidnapings, shootings, sluggings, all done in a pleasant, amusing and sophisticated manner—as befits the rare book social stratum. The dialogue, except for a Navajo sequence, is excellent; the cast swell, though a few usually impeccable members play with what seemed too obvious insincerity.

Melvyn Douglas, as nearly always, is competent and attractive, and it is comforting to watch him handle his comedy easily—even embarrassing moments like the aforementioned Indian dialogue—and taking the whole business in his stride.

All we have to say about Wifie Florence Rice is that we don't like her hair-do, and it worried us throughout. Sheppard Strudwick, Broadway veteran for all his youth, makes a nice cinema debut. His hair-do isn't just right, cinematically speaking, either, but his sincerity and rightness make considerable out of the part of Ned Morgan, the accused youngster. Mary Howard and Claire Dodd are both attractive as the other two young ladies in the case, Claire being very much in it. George Zucco, Louis Calhern and Nat Pendelton add.

Subsidiaries include another of those interesting historical mystery shots which send you out into the air full of question marks and headed for the nearest library. This time it is about the man in the iron mask. There is also a comedy, "Snow Gets in Your Eyes," and the newsreel.

The Post's New Yorker

New York, July 29.

MILTON BERLE was being sued for commissions by Charles Morrison, his former manager. The litigants suppenaed Will Morrisey to give information regarding Berle's earnings in "Saluta" . . . Will's pride was hurt that Broadway should forget so quickly his past achievements of care-free and cash-free grandeur . . . "Morrisey," he stormed in reply, "never paid anybody!"

* * * *

THIS IS THE STORY that never has been told—a mystery that began when a horn-tooting, confetti-throwing mob made obeisance to the departing year of our grace, 1932. The New Year's prospects weighed heavily on cuff-producer Will Morrisey's heart; but undaunted he braved the snow-clad streets of the Broadway which had been a cool reception to his plans for presenting "Crooner." Will's eye was attuned to the search for an angel-prospect . . . but Broadway was cold.

* * * *

WITH SIXTY-FIVE of his actors in tow, Will Morrisey paraded to the stage door of the closed Carroll Theater. An armed guard raised a rifle, but Will quieted his fears. "How," he shouted authoritatively, "do you put lights in this dump?" The guard mumbled something about a machine that looked like an organ. "All you do," he informed, "is push the button, and the lights go up." In 20 minutes the "Crooner" troup lined up on the most elegant stage in Broadway theaterdom. Two hours later, the chorines shed their costumes in the most luxurious dressing rooms ever created. And Morrisey was ensconced in the dream-like offices where once King Carroll had reigned. "And Equity can't get me here," Will enthused. And Equity couldn't—because for once Will was guarded—instead of chased—by sheriffs!

* * * *

FOR ALL THAT THE WORLD KNEW, the Earl Carroll Theater was dark and unoccupied . . . but Broadway buzzed. And in these glorious recesses, for many moons, the cuff-producer of the age rehearsed his show . . . at one rehearsal he stared down at the orchestra where unoccupied seats should have been. Instead, he found 200 people observing the stage-antics. Somebody had charged them 50 cents admission . . . Will immediately eliminated this evil. Thenceforth he, and he alone, took the 50 cents each—from the 400 customers who paid their four bits daily to witness the gargantuan spectacle of a Morrisey show rehearsing without rental in the best theater ever built on Broadway.

* * * *

THE OWNER OF THE LAND on which the defunct theater stood directed that it be torn down. He made one mistake, however; for he came to see a rehearsal . . . came, saw and was conquered. "So," he consoled, "so I won't have the bus terminal I always wanted here." He liked the rehearsals, and was permitted to see them every day. As a special concession, he didn't have to pay his way in; not without a struggle anyway.

* * * *

THE BROADWAY "BOYS" made open house here, and left their Sing-Sing'd fingerprints upon Earl Carroll's $5,000 desk. Policemen, tired after their vigilant parade, came to rest their tootsies and to afford a bluecoated claque. George White and Irving Berlin came, too—to lease the theater. They discussed terms—with Morrisey . . . "Not if you want to change the name of the theater," Will told them. "Carrol's my friend, and his name sticks."

* * * *

SHAPIRO, THE BUILDER, decided to wreck the place and get the steel back. The brick company wanted their bricks, the plumbing providers their outlay, and the chairmen their seats. "Call a creditors' meeting right away," Will Morrisey ordered. And so it came to pass.

* * * *

THERE NEVER WILL BE a similar scene again . . . as occurred in an attorney's office that spring day of 1933 . . . In the counsel-room were massed the creditors demanding their overdue. And at the head of the table sat Morrisey—producer of "Crooner"—who had usurped by his daring the grandest theater ever built in America . . . Carroll was in Paris, and cabled: "What's this? A gag?" Poof—on a man who had to resort to purchase and cash outlay to get property. Anybody could do that.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Loving One Man Without Hope, Unwilling to Marry Another Without Love, Unhappy Girl Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: When I was quite young I was madly in love with a young man who was very much in love with me. But after a time I realized he was letting liquor ruin his life and my love for him changed. That disappointment caused me to lose faith in all men; I decided they were not to be trusted; that sooner or later bad habits would crop out.

* * * *

Years later I met another man who possessed every quality I admire. We had much in common, including the same religious faith. From daily association over a period of 18 months, our friendship slowly developed into love. Just knowing him restored my faith in mankind, for while he had some faults, his good qualities outweighed the bad ones. He had an inferiority complex which made him moody at times and hard to understand.

* * * *

He told me he loved me, and I believed him, because our love seemed based on something permanent. Marriage was not discussed but I thought he would propose when he was financially in a position to do so. Then suddenly something happened to cause a misunderstanding and we drifted apart. To this day I do not know just what happened, as I was never given a satisfactory explanation. It would have been easier to give him up if I had known the reason. I have tried to make myself believe he didn't love me; perhaps never had; but my heart refuses to believe it.

* * * *

Trying to forget him, I plunged into my work and welcomed added responsibilities. I took up special studies, hoping to become too busy to think of him, but alas, he was my last thought at night. In my dreams it was always his face I saw. I adjusted my life without him, thinking he would return some day. But two years later he married another girl after a very short courtship.

* * * *

There is no reason to build secret hopes around him any longer but I can't seem to forget him entirely. Perhaps my pride was hurt, at loving someone who didn't love me. How can I best forget him? For some time now I have been keeping company with a young man who is morally good but who never goes to church and who is inclined to be selfish. He has asked me to marry him, but I have said, "no," because I do not love him. I cannot imagine a worse fate than to be married to someone you do not love or vice versa. How can I love him or anyone else when my heart belongs to another? I had always thought that time heals all wounds, but today I feel that when I am old and gray, sitting alone by my fireside, my thoughts will still center on that man, hoping that he is happy.

DISAPPOINTED.

Road to Recovery.

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: One of the most lamentable features of a romantic disappointment is the conviction of personal unworthiness that all too often accrues to the person rejected. As you suggest, his pride is hurt at having his offering of self rejected. His personality suffers an eclipse. Some eager buoyancy, some quality or high hearted self sufficiency departs from his manner, and his reactions to life thereafter are likely to be more mechanical than spontaneous. Unless, of course, he has the indestructible resiliency of spirit to conclude that what is one man's poison is another man's tonic; and that anybody is liable, now and again, to make the mistake of casting pearls before swine.

* * * *

There is no such thing as a disappointment in love that leaves a crippling scar, providing you are willing to bind up your wounds, keep your face to the future, and proceed with courage, confidence and enterprise unabated. I refer, of course, to romantic love of the courting variety. The love of parent for child, or the love of some women and some men for a cherished and worthy mate, belongs to an entirely different category of emotion and experience.

* * * *

I believe that romantic disappointments are, in many instances, merely the externalized growing pains of certain artless and enterprising personalities, some of whom have the stuff of character to turn such experiences to actual profit. Sara Teasdale, the poet, expresses it thus: "I have not come the way in vain, for I have good of all my pain. My spirit's quiet house shall be built of naked stones I trod on roads where I lost sight of God." One does not need to have broken one of the Ten Commandments to lose sight of God. One loses sight of Him in those moments when one loses faith in mankind, or when one relinquishes one's self to despair or self commiseration because of some fellow being's defection.

* * * *

One of the finest books I have ever read on the subject of misplaced and unrequited love (a book so fine that I am constantly baffled by its absence from best-seller lists) is Florence Guy Seabury's, "Love Is a Challenge." With extraordinary wisdom and profound understanding that amounts, almost, to spiritual second sight; with exquisite tact and never failing sympathy, Mrs. Seabury reveals the workings of the human heart and the human spirit to the reader. One cannot read it without achieving greater understanding of himself and others; without experiencing a rebirth of self respect and self confidence, of faith and trust and hope. You realize, indeed, that "love is a challenge" to growth, ever and always; and never a source of unyielding frustration, when it is really love. The book has a soothing quality akin to that of a cool hand laid on a fevered brow. It is both scientific and intuitive, each attribute lending authority to the other.

* * * *

I suggest that you read this book; and, also, Dr. Esther Harding's "The Way of All Women: A Psychological Interpretation," with introduction by Dr. C. G. Jung—a book aimed at "a clarification of the confusion existing in the relationship between the sexes;" a book which unravels the mystery of that fusion of spiritual, biological and psychological factors which constitute the feminine personality; a book of which it has been said that it "reveals woman to herself and interprets her to men."

* * * *

After digesting the contents of these two books, you will know better than you do now why you ever fell in love, and have remained so long and hopelessly in love, with a man who eventually jilted you; and you will probably come to the sane and cheerful conclusion that it was an uninformed mistake that can easily be outlived with a bit of well-directed effort.

Jackets Give New Life to Summer Dresses

Boleros Add Gala Variety To Wardrobe

Jackets Are Perfect Answer to Vacation Problem of Dinner Dress.

TIRED of your summer frocks? If so, brighten them up with jaunty jackets or boleros. Besides giving color and individuality to old dresses, several jackets and boleros increase the variety and quantity of any late summer wardrobe. Even Hollywood actresses use different jackets to change their numerous costumes. And jackets are the perfect answer to the evening dress vacation problem.

Seven-In-One.

The woman who has one evening dress to wear on vacation yet wants it to look different for each occasion can change it with jackets and boleros. For example, with a black chiffon evening dress she wears a lace, pique or shark skin bolero of chalk color. The second evening she could choose one of the new knitted angora boleros in pink, yellow or green. On the third evening the bolero may be changed for a broad girdle, hip length jacket of beige in rich Oriental shades of red, blue and black design. An inexpensive gold metal girdle and short jacket increases the sophistication of the gown for the fourth evening. A solid black jacket of the same material is still another way for making the same dress look new, while a rainbow colored jacket would see her smartly through the sixth evening.

For Daytime.

Daytime dresses may also be given new life by a series of jackets and boleros. Here are some suggestions for individualizing your basic daytime frocks.

With a white linen wear a varicolored bolero of print or flowered linen. Or, try a striped bolero and girdle in raspberry dregs of wine and dull blue.

A polka dotted boxy or bolero jacket in black or navy blue will give distinction to any light colored summer dress that has lost its zip.

With a black silk dress wear a bright plaid bolero and girdle in red and white, yellow and white or blue and white. A pink, blue, white or purple lace bolero will give variety to the same black dress.

Hatless Americans Get Last Laugh as Mode Mimics Them

Paris (U.P.).—Hats off—and there's no flag passing by! The "off with the hat" movement, launched rather feebly a year ago by Parisian coiffeurs, has finally penetrated the fashion ranks. During the past month there have been more and more uncovering heads appearing in smart cocktail lounges, tea rooms or dress salons.

It begins to look as though the American girls who used to shock Paris by strolling down the grand boulevards without a chapeau will have the last laugh. Both Antoine and Antonio, now rivals for the heads of the fashionable, declare that the only smart coiffure is one which cannot have a hat put over it. They admit the use of ribbons, veils, floral garlands, jewels and bows. But hat—no.

PATTERN 6121

By Alice Brooks.

VARIETY IN FILET crochet to suit your every need! These oblongs make a luncheon set, a buffet set or doilies. If you prefer round doilies, crochet just the center of each oblong. The size is varied by the cotton used. Pattern 6121 contains instructions and charts for making doilies; illustration of them; materials used.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Spangles Sprinkle All of Most Svelte Skirts in Summer

Paris (U.P.).—Spangles, sequins or paillettes—choose whichever name you will—are glittering more frequently than ever.

Instead of getting "common," the spangles grow smarter as the Paris summer season gets under way. There's scarcely an evening grown without them, and the glittering note is echoed in shoes, purses, gloves and other accessories.

Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy, American "ambassadress" to the Court of St. James's, chose a white lace court gown embroidered in gold and silver sequins to wear for the recent British court presentations, and Rosemary Kennedy wore white tulle with silver sequins scattered over its bouffant skirt and train.

At the gala opening of the Ambassadeurs, Paris' first big social event of the season, paillette-embroidered evenings gowns fairly blinded the eyes of unprepared interlopers.

Swim Star Advises Backstroke To Develop Beautiful Figure

Erna Kompa Also Stresses Value of Diet in Keeping Fit.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IT TAKES a swimming champion who is also a "Nine to Five Girl" to give you business women pointers on how to keep a lovely figure. You do it the same way that Erna Kompa, the lovely backstroke star, trains for a swimming meet, except that since you are not out to win titles, you do not have to work quite so hard.

"I think that women should have too much vanity ever to lose their figures," Miss Kompa declares. "There is never any excuse for rolls of fat about the hips or a sagging bust contour. From my experience in swimming I have found that any woman can keep a beautiful figure merely by swimming three times a week. If she will really swim, she need go in for only fifteen minutes."

And what stroke does this beautiful swimmer recommend? The backstroke, of course! She likes it for speed, but has found, incidentally, that more than any other stroke it tones and firms the pectoral muscles supporting the bust, and that it also develops a lovely back.

Swims Twice Daily.

While training, Miss Kompa likes to swim for half an hour in the morning and then again for three-quarters of an hour after work. We are inclined to assume that champions in any sport have nothing to do but train, but here is a top-noteher who figuratively punches the time clock every morning along with the rest of the working girls. As secretary to a busy executive in a large organization, her shorthand must be as efficient as her backstroke.

If a champion can find time to train, surely you can manage enough time to exercise to keep your figure. Erna Kompa adds exercise to her swimming! After a day at the office you would do well to adopt her after-dinner program. As soon as dinner is over she puts on her hat and goes out for a brisk 45-minute walk—"Just at the time when normally we expect to sink down with a sigh of relief and reach for the paper," she says humorously.

Common Sense Needed.

Exercise is not the whole story, however, and the swim star's tips on diet are as sound as her ideas on swimming. "You know, it isn't necessary for people to starve themselves," she says, "a woman can keep her weight down easily by following the calorie method and using a little moderation. I think it is all right to exceed your caloric limit once in awhile, if you drop down to less than you require the next day. Balanced meals do the trick."

Common sense and determination seem to be the keynotes of a champion's program, and . . . well, you have seen photos of Miss Kompa. She is 5 feet 6 inches tall and beautifully streamlined with these measurements: Bust, 33 inches; hips, 35 inches; waist, 25½ inches. Her weight of 123 pounds never varies.

Swimming will develop bust and back muscles.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Dream Husband.

(A wife's soliloquy.)

Surely somewhere in this world there's a man who has some conception,
Of the work it takes to keep a house running, and who firmly
Would say, "Now I want you to come out of that kitchen this minute!
"We'll have someone in to do all of this cleaning. What's more,
"We'll go out on Sundays for dinner the rest of the summer."
A man who would put his foot down on my entertaining his family,
Or anyone else, and who constantly would be saying,
"Now why don't you save yourself? Don't bother to have meat for dinner."

II

Who would see through that silly grass widow who preens with her dog on the corner,
Who would know that that smirky Miss Wimp in his office,
Was not overcome by his masculine charm, but rather his seat with the mighty
Who would be fully on to Joe Gadd and the other bums who came borrowing.
Who instead of thinking how catty I was in my judgment
Of my good friend Grace Crosset, would know she was slippery,
And firmly demand that we drop her at once and forever.

III

Surely somewhere there's a man I could really trust fully,
And who when I saw him starting out at a party
To look at the moon with a slinky or kittenish companion,
A man who could see through the most obvious feminine flattery,
And could laugh with me afterward over such banalities as,
"Oh, Mr. X, tell me what type of girls you like best?"
"I bet you played football," and "Just what do you think about women?"

IV.

Surely somewhere there's a man I could be completely myself with,
And not have to always be careful about bringing up ticklish subjects
Nor always having to flatter and build up his sense of importance
Nor carefully hide what little brains I possess under a bushel
Nor always approach by the indirect way and see that his fur is stroked rightly
Nor constantly have all my powers attuned to see that his mood is the right one
But say what I think and do what I please in a man to man fashion
Without phisically walking on eggs or treading a tight rope so lightly.

V.

Surely there must exist a man who who would listen to all my complainings,
Instead of telling me his and who would patiently help me
In deciding on hats and what to do with the maid and the children;
Who would advise me gravely concerning the squabbles in bridge clubs;
Who would let me step out of my role of nursemaid, mother, Jehovah,
Into that of a very weak woman; let me change from oak into ivy.
Oh surely somewhere there's a man who would take all my burdens upon him,
Or is there? . . . Are all men really alike? . . . How I wonder?

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 29.

IN THROUGH this midtown window, every soggy evening, pour the manifold noises of summer New York. I figure that the windows of nearly 400 families open on my Murray Hill courtyard — and they talk about East Side tenements! Breaking down the noises which help make the nights more hideous, it is easy to figure that every family has a radio, and I have heard the voice of our revered President multiplied probably 150 times, which is a lot of volume. In fact, every word is both loud and clear. Our reception is fine.

ALICE HUGHES.

Most of these sets are turned on full tilt after sundown and the racket of varied programs is incredible, even to me, who is forced to listen. With such a large population we can always count on at least two late parties, stimulated by strong waters, and these produce ribald songs, girlish screams, the crash of breaking glass, and occasionally the dull thud of a body overcome by the heat. Remember that, Manhattan being what it is, I know only one of these 400 families in the court, and that is my own sister, who lives next door. Her handsome collie, Maggie, has a fine, carrying voice, too. Domestic brawls are no rarity, either, for summer tempers are short and sharp, and I have learned some interesting language this month.

By 2 in the morning, when I am pitching and tossing, the hullabaloo is over, and then begin the "lonely noises." When I was a girl the lonellest noise I knew was the wail of a locomotive on the Boston & Maine. Later, here in New York, a liner's siren at midnight filled me with nostalgic sadness. Now I find that the saddest of the little lonely noises of early morn is the clack, clack of a typewriter in the court. Who's writing, and why, and what? There's a night writer somewhere near me, and it's mysterious, lonely!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I hear that Franchot Tone is looking for a house in nearby Rockland County . . . Mrs. Della Wilson, of Beacon, near here, is such a careless woman that she has just drawn nine months in the Dutchess County Jail. She told the judge the reason she had married four times in 19 years without ever getting a divorce was that she wanted a home. Nothing wrong with that, of course, but Della certainly was careless, and now has nine months in chokey to repent . . .

Neighbor J. P. Morgan has turned up in England for a long stay, and we Murray Hillbillies are now on our own. Not that the banker leads the neighborhoood routs and revels, but he does give the Hill a certain tone. Now the Pinkerton flatfeet on duty stare morosely at his empty Madison avenue house, and eye sadly the beautiful marble mausoleum next door which conceals so many of the richest and loveliest art and literary treasures of the world . . .

I learn laughingly that one of our better Swedish eating houses, the Drotningholm, has just honored the Garbo friend and adviser (isn't that nice?) by naming one of its dishes "the Stokowski Loaf." It is cold jellied ham, which seems suitable . . .

Taste in Attire, Clean-Up Habit Urged on Beach

Shore Conventions Relax but Conduct Must Be Watched.

By Margaret Wallace

THE NEW freedom, according to many summer vacationists, may be found at the seashore where hampering conventions and restricting standards of conduct may be set aside gaily in the comaraderie which prevails.

Yet behavior at the bathing beach has a code all its own, a not too strenuous one, it must be admitted. But a code, just the same.

In the first place, it is good form to choose one's bathing attire with some thought as to general appearance. For those who lack a good form in the physical sense of the word it would be showing better tase if they used a bit of discretion in the selection of beach and play clothes.

Clean Up Litter.

"Keep the beach clean" is a dictum that decency and convention demand from all who sport by the waves. There is little real love of the ocean in a person who can leave its shore littered with waste and rubbish from the luncheon or playtime activities. Bits of orange peel, peanut shells and banana skins are inevitable signs of the "tripper," the abomination of resident populations at seaside resorts. There is really no excuse for it. One is inexcusably lazy who will not dig a big hole in the sand, and cover over the remains of luncheon and play.

Good taste in the surf dictates that strangers do not splash and push fellow bathers if it proves disagreeable to them. It is quite as rude, to push over a stranger into the water as it would be to knock him down in the street.

Too elaborate making of one's toilet on the beach is a breach of the code, too. Naturally, one is entitled to a little more freedom in this regard due to the fact that a free and easy spirit generally prevails, but pedicuring, manicuring, and other personal service of this nature are taboo.

Use Your Own "Props."

To seize, without permission, anothers beach chair or umbrella even during the owner's absence is quite without the code. To do so always makes an embarrassing moment when the rightful owner appears. The best thing to do is to provide yourself with such "props" for the proper enjoyment of beach life, mark them carefully with your own name.

On the beach as well as in the town, there are persons who seem to enjoy the unlawful use of others' property and trust to luck to furnish them with the necessities for their personal enjoyment.

Some fortunate hosts can provide their guests with the comforts of a bath house after their dips in the sea. In using these bath houses the thoughtful guest remembers a few cardinal rules of behavior.

Do not leave your bathing suit wet and soggy lying upon the floor for some one else to pick up and hang out to dry. There may or may not be servants on whom this burden must fall. But in any case it is good form to attend to this little aftermath of your bath yourself.

Be certain to leave the bath house as neat and clean after your dressing as when you entered it. This is a courtesy due to your host and the guest who will use it after you.

Mrs. Laura Curtis Wed To John Messick Gross

New York, July 29.—Devoted friends of the former Mrs. Laura Merriam Curtis long ago gave up—but not in despair—of her ever doing the hidebound conventional thing. Today at her noon wedding to John Messick Gross, vice president of the Bethlehem Steel Co., she wore neither a hat nor gloves. Her frock, cut on very simple lines, was of ashes of roses crepe, and she satisfied social custom, by carrying a large bouquet of orchids. Except for the orchids, the ceremony, which was performed at her own apartment at Hampshire House, was noteworthy for its simplicity.

It was distinctly a family affair, with James F. Curtis, jr., giving his mother in marriage. The small group present included her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Bostwick, of Westbury, Long Island; her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Freeman Curtis, jr., of Roslyn, Long Island; Pauline Curtis and Frazier Curtis, of Washington, her younger daughter and younger son; her sister, Mrs. John T. Wheelwright, of Boston, and Mrs. Wallach Merriam, of Washington.

At the conclusion of a brief wedding trip, the couple may, and most likely will, make their home in three different places—New York City; Mr. Gross' estate, Four Oaks Farm, in Saucon Valley, Bethlehem, Pa., and Washington, where Mrs. Gross will certainly find time to keep an eye on the white-tie parties at her perenially popular and hard-to-get-in 1925 F Street Club. When asked if the club might pass out of the social scene, she was definite in her reply that the fashionable rendezvous would continue its career without any interruptions, and that its efficient staff and delicious cooking would be there, the same as usual, the middle of September, when the doors open, after a summer siesta, for the winter season.

Was Presented To Society Here

When the late William R. Merriam, who had been Governor of Minnesota, received an appointment in Washington as director of the census, he and Mrs. Merriam brought with them their sub-deb daughter, who shortly after was presented to society, becoming for that season one of the "big six" of the debutante contingent. That was the beginning of Mrs. Gross' appearance on the Washington scene. Her role, developing from that of a walk-on part, grew to leading lady, and she has had her name in lights on the Capital's social marquee ever since.

She is well known for her philanthropic interests, for her active participation in the Community Chest, and for other ventures of this type. When, with her keen business head, she opened the 1925 F Street Club, no one doubted that it would be a success.

It will be recalled that in January of this year Mrs. Gross was granted a divorce from James Freeman Curtis, New York attorney. This dissolved their second marriage, for in April 1924, their bonds were severed for the first time in Paris.

Mr. Gross Member Of Exclusive Clubs

Twelve months after the divorce decree in 1924, however, the former Mrs. Curtis's engagement to Harrison Williams had been duly announced. Less than a week later, she changed her mind, decided that she would marry her first husband all over again and in May 1925, it was done. Mr. Williams later became the husband of Mrs. Mona Strader Schelinger Bush, who has since then gathered laurels for being one of the best-dressed women in the world.

Mr. Gross, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Kunkel Gross was for many years an officer of the Pennsylvania Railroad before his present association with Bethlehem Steel. He numbers among his exclusive clubs, the Maryland Club of Baltimore, the Racquet Club of Philadelphia, and India House of New York. His first wife was the former Miss Mary Washington Robinson, of Baltimore, whose death occurred in 1921. They had no children.

Cabinet People To Stay Away Till Labor Day

Hulls to Brave It Out Alone for Rest of Summer in Washington.

"After Labor Day" is the reply generally following inquiries as to when most of the Cabinet members and their families will be returning to Washington. Few, very few, are those coming back to the Capital before cooler days roll around. With the exception of Secretary of State Hull, those who do return in the next few weeks will be out of town again before most persons know they are here.

Having returned to Washington Wednesday after a brief vacation in Atlantic City, Mrs. Hull plans to stay in Washington with the Secretary most of the remainder of the summer. In fact, it looks as if they will be the only Cabinet couple here through August. If they do leave town for some mountain or seaside resort, it will be for only a short time "and so far, we haven't made any plans even to do that," Mrs. Hull said yesterday. Meanwhile, the Secretary, one of Washington's most energetic officials, is staying close to his office during one of the busiest summers thus far in his career.

Chances are, Washington will not see any of the Woodrings around until after Labor Day. Since early this month they have been at Hyannisport, Mass., where they have taken a house for the summer. With them are Mrs. Woodring's parents, former Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge.

Morgenthaus Now In Southern France

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., who are with their sons and daughter, recently arrived in Paris for a few days, now are in southern France on the Riviera, where they will spend most of next month. They will return to their home in New York State late in August and be back in Washington in September.

The Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, who have been in Cleveland the past week for the meeting of the American Bar Association, will leave there this morning for Chicago, where they will spend several days before going on to Wisconsin for a vacation. They are expected to return to Washington after Labor Day.

Following a trip to Alaska, the Postmaster General, James A. Farley, has been in Seattle several days. Leaving there today he will go to Victoria, Canada, for a brief visit. His schedule from now on, until mid-August, is full of short trips and speaking engagements, but he is expected back in the East in about two weeks. Mrs. Farley, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Marshall, at Malibu Beach, Calif., will return East later.

Back in Washington to spend a few days the past week came Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy. She left again yesterday morning for Camp Rapidan, in Virginia, where the Secretary has been resting for some time. She expects to be there until early September.

Secretary Perkins Plans to Stay Here

The Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes left yesterday for the West Coast, whence they will sail from Seattle for Alaska, August 3. They will return to Washington after Labor Day.

When the Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace, concludes a rather strenuous speaking schedule, he probably will join Mrs. Wallace and their daughter, Jean, at Green Mountain Falls, Colo. However, if he does, he will not stay long, because he is due to return to Washington shortly after the middle of August. He now is in Iowa, where Thursday he spoke at Des Moines, and Friday at Dubuque.

Still enjoying London are the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, who are expected back the middle of next month.

Staying close to her desk these days is Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, who recently returned from a trip abroad and considers her vacation over for the year. She will remain in Washington this week, and for most weekends from now until autumn.

Mrs. Dunbar Urges Local Responsibility

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

A challenge to be ready to resume responsibility for the solution of community welfare problems when Government agencies relinquish it was issued last night by Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, in an address before the Chautauqua Women's Club, Chautauqua, N. Y.

There has been a general hand-washing of local responsibility since the economic emergency has made it necessary to turn to the Government for aid, she said, but there must be a return to community leadership and to adjustment on a community basis. "There is no other way to hold fast to ideals which made America, than through the ideals of sharing," she declared.

Granting the unquestioned necessity for Government agencies which have been set up to meet the greater and greater demands for relief, she, nevertheless, decried the effect it was having on the American people. She did not discuss those receiving aid, but those who had, until now, been concerned in administering relief.

Neighborliness Still A Paramount Need

"What has happened to our spirit of neighborliness and become of the willingness of civic-minded men and women to plan and work for a more satisfactory community life?" she asked. "What will happen to the country if local leadership is not restored and if the voluntary association of neighbors for the solution of common problems is given up?"

"It seems impossible," said Mrs. Dunbar, "that American women could live complacent, without social concern for others and without using their talents to do something about it.

"We can no longer work as individuals if we would accomplish the greatest good. More and more we appreciate the necessity and value of team work, and have a growing appreciation of the community as 'a focus of social life or the common living of social beings.

"Prior to the World War, too many of us were preoccupied with ourselves and withdrew from the neighborhood to serve our own interests, suddenly we found we were compelled to share with others, and finally we became aware of problems far beyond the possibilities of local solution. The need became apparent for more consistent and united attack on certain problems. In spite of the growing group consciousness and of insistent demand of greater need became apparent for more of social machinery and social organization which we had created, and turned outside for assistance.

"Nothing in national history has ever equaled present-day government participation in the realm of human welfare. Billions are being spent to meet our collective needs as well as those of individual citizens. Local social machinery, lacking adequate funds, overwhelmed by the responsibility, turned to higher units of government.

Must Safeguard Welfare Machinery

"What effect will this have on local agencies; on you as board members of well-known, well-established community agencies? Are we still feeling a sense of personal responsibility and are we safeguarding community machinery for future use?"

Asserting that some day the community, or "you and I as board members of social agencies and institutions" must resume full responsibility, Mrs Dunbar urged that both men's and women's organizations be ready to assume it when the time came. She challenged the women of her audience to acquaint themselves with the problems of their own communities; to know how many were on the relief rolls, the reasons for their being there and the conditions under which they were living. She warned against the "hand-washing" attitude which willingly placed the cloak of responsibility on Government agencies and left it there.

"We are still our brother's keeper," she declared. "We have to think in terms of personal responsibility. It is not enough to turn over the problems to official agencies. Distinctly community needs should be met through the pooled wisdom of an interested community.

"Even while dependent on the Government for material needs, other needs challenge the country—cultural, spiritual and inspirational needs which must be met by the leadership of such groups as the men's and women's clubs of the country."

Invited to Speak By Late President

Mrs. Dunbar was invited to address the Chautauqua Woman's Club by the late Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker, who was its president for many years. She received a letter from Mrs. Pennypacker just a week before her death, reminding her of the date. Mrs. William H. Alexander is now president of the club, whose membership comprises women from all parts of the United States staying at Chautauqua for the summer.

Mrs. Dunbar's talk was in line with the theme of her administration as president of the general federation, "Adjusting democracy for human welfare." She also spoke from a background of more than 20 years' experience as executive secretary of the Oregon State Tuberculosis Association.

She expects to return to headquarters here Monday and continue the work on federation problems which has kept her close to her desk for some weeks.

Job's Daughters Bethels Staging States Pageant

The Dramatic Clubs of the Bethels of Job's Daughters of the District, under the general supervision of Mrs. Laura Wallace, and with the co-operation of the Robert LeBruce Chapter of DeMolay, are sponsoring an All-States pageant, to be given during the supreme session of Job's Daughters, to be held here on August 23, 24 and 25. The pageant is to be given the opening night at the Wardman Park Theater.

With a cast of over 75, and the assistance of all the District drill teams, it is expected to be a highlight in the session program. It deals with the reward of patience and the rectitude of faith. It also brings out the relationship between Job's Daughters, the DeMolay, the Order of the Eastern Star, and the Masonic fraternity.

Opening with the story of Job, the pageant goes through the ages and closes with a finale in which flags of all the States, brought here by the visiting members of Job's Daughters, will be massed.

A feature of the pageant will be the dance ensembles under the direction of Madelon Smithson-Hodgson.

The speaking parts are under Mrs. Wallace and Miss Doris Brattain. Larry Thurston, master counselor of De Molay, is directing and writing the boys' part in the pageant.

All the singing is under supervision of the choirs of the District Bethels, with solos by Mrs. Marie Desi, O. E. S., and the Misses Nancy Ould and Mary Alice Brattain, of Job's Daughters.

In order to defray the expenses of renting the costumes for the pageant, the newspaper staffs of Bethels 1 and 2 are co-operating and editing a special newspaper to be sold at the session. They are contacting Bethels as far away as Canada for news. The editors for this special paper are Miss Rosa Robbins, of Bethel 1, and Miss Mary Rose Manning, of Bethel 2.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

DANCING and swimming are vieing with golf for popularity at the Congressional Country Club this season. The regular Saturday and Thursday night parties draw between 200 and 300 for dinners, with more appearing for dancing later. The Saturday affairs are formal and those on Thursday, more or less "as you will."

The large out-door pool at the back of the clubhouse is open until 10 o'clock and on warm nights is as popular as the dance floor. Those who aren't "in the swim" watch those who are, from the broad balcony outside the ballroom, overlooking the pool.

No special entertainments have been planned since the successful Night in Venice party at the end of June. This affair made use of the artistic setting of the clubhouse and the pool for an effective pageant. Earlier in the season a Gay Nineties party was held indoors.

The entertainment committee, of which Verne Simmons is the newly appointed chairman, plans a Hawaiian night, probably the second week in September, as the first big affair of the coming season. Mrs. Simmons, who for a time was the only woman serving on the entertainment committee, is again a member this year and she and Mr. Simmons, since their return from a week's visit in Asheville, N. C., have been considering activities for the fall. Plans for six months ahead are to be made at a committee meeting next month.

Mrs. Russell Conn and Mrs. Ralph Payne, who is chairman of the District Woman Golfers, are the two other women serving on the committee.

* * *

MRS. RICHARD HOGUE, past president of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women, returned last week from a vacation trip north with Mr. Hogue and left immediately for Lenoir, N. C., where she is spending two weeks with her mother.

She and Mr. Hogue motored to Vermont and up into Quebec, going wherever their fancy led them.

Mr., Mrs. Steele Plan Motor Trip In New York State

FRANK B. STEELE, president of the Arts Club and governor of the local Society of Mayflower Descendants, will leave today, accompanied by Mrs. Steel and her sister, Mrs. Richard Kirtland, of Rochester, for a motor trip to New York.

Mrs. Kirtland, who has been visiting the Steeles for two weeks, is returning home and they will stop for a brief stay with her and then go to Buffalo to spend a few days with their son, Varian Steele, and his wife, who are now living there.

They will be back in Washington in time for August activities at the Arts Club, but will miss the chafing dish supper which is announced for tomorrow night in the garden.

AND, speaking of the Arts Club, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Corse, who are active members, have gone to New Hampshire to spend part of the season at their summer home.

Spanish Party Set for Tonight

Miss Edna Lonigan tonight will open her home, 1637 Thirty-fourth street, in Georgetown for a party being given under the auspices of the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy for the benefit of the relief ship campaign. The affair is one of a series planned between now and October to raise funds for sending clothing and supplies to war sufferers in Spain.

If the weather is fair, the guests will gather in the garden where a quartet from the National Symphony Orchestra will play Spanish music as well as other numbers, and there will be a short talk by Juan Means, second secretary of the Spanish Embassy.

Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, is honorary chairman of the local committee for the relief ship, with David Barr as chairman and William Dodd, jr., secretary. The Washington group is co-operating with others throughout the country in an effort to raise money for 5,000 tons of foodstuffs, clothings and supplies. Another party being given this evening is that at which Bryant Putney will be host at his home in Rockville, Md. Washingtonians will be among the guests there also. It will be a game party, all the proceeds of which will be added to the relief fund.

Later affairs in the series to be sponsored will include a supper dance and a donation tea at which a bundle of clothing will be the charge for admission.

Among those who will be guests this evening at the home of Miss Lonigan will be Mr. and Mrs. Perry Fellowes, Mr. and Mrs. Nels Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Hallihan, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Williams, Mrs. Dora Haynes, Miss Selma Borchardt, Mr. and Mrs. David Siskind, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Williams, Miss Margaret Klem, Dean Brimhall and Henry Aaronson.

Kamp Kahlert Initiates New Activity Programs

Because of many new girls entering Kamp Kahlert, the Y. W. C. A. camp on West River, various new interest groups are being offered.

Some of these are Indian lore, instructed by the Indian counsellor, Leah Hicks, in which the girls are making beaded belts, designs for hot plate pads, plaques and tom-toms, and the camp craft group led by Brownye Middleton. This group is planning cook-outs and canoe trips.

The dancing group is practicing quadrilles; the music appreciation group is practicing skits in preparation for the Maryland ball Friday night.

The theme of the Maryland ball is the story of Betsy Patterson, a famous figure in Baltimore history, and Jerome Bonaparte. It is being planned by a group of older girls who are in the counsellor's course, led by Brownye Middleton, Jo Hamilton, and Florence Materse.

Prepare for Installation.

The Past State Councilors of the Daughters of America will hold a special meeting tomorrow at Northwest Masonic Temple. Preperations will be made for the public installation at the coming State council conventions.

Underwood & Underwood.

CEREMONIES at the supreme session of the Order of Job's Daughters, to be held here August 23, 24 and 25 at the Wardman Park Hotel, will feature the drill teams of Washington Bethels. They will participate in the pageant to be presented on the opening night of the convention as well as in other programs during the conclave. Left to right are Minnetta Barnes, of Bethel 1; Winifred Smith, Bethel 2; Shirley Patterson, Bethel 3, and Ruth Brown, Bethel 5.

Daughters of the Confederacy Plan Convention in Alexandria

Mrs. Bailey, General Chairman of Arrangements, Busy on Program Which Includes Greeting by City and an Historical Evening.

Alexandria, like Washington, is having a generous share of conventions this season. In the spring, the Virginia State Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, held its annual congress there and, in October the Virginia Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will meet.

Mary Custis Lee—Seventeenth Virginia Regiment Chapter will be hostess to the visiting delegates, assisted by the Fairfax and Falls Church chapters. The Alexandria organization, which now has about 100 members, a number of whom are on the inactive list, was formed some years ago through the merging of the two units whose names are combined in its title.

Mrs. Margaret Finks Bailey, who has been its president for the past year is also general chairman of convention arrangements. She has also served in the American Legion Auxiliary as president of the Alexandria unit and is now department music chairman in the State organization and prominent in the Alexandria Young Democratic Club. She is postmistress at Mount Vernon.

Serving with her as officers of the U. D. C. Chapter are Mrs. Charles Woolf, vice president; Mrs. Harry Kirk, treasurer; Miss Mae Stonnell, secretary, and Miss Edna Alexander, registrar.

Regular meetings of the chapter are held monthly at Lee Camp Hall on Prince street, except in July and August. This summer special meetings have been called to make plans for the convention. Mrs. Bailey has not yet completed her committees and until they have been appointed, will not be ready to announce details of the program.

The convention sessions are to be held in the Baptist Church and it is expected that about 250 will attend from all parts of the State. The president's dinner will be held at the George Mason Hotel.

The program at which Mrs. Sidney Cox, of Smithfield, Va., State president, will preside, will be dedicated to a hero of the Confederacy but to which one has not yet been decided. It will open with a ceremony at which the delegates will be greeted by city officials of Alexandria and by their State officers. That evening there will be a reception honoring the officers, of which Mrs. Bailey will be in charge.

Another social affair in connection with the convention is to be an historical evening. Plans are under way to hold it in one of the old buildings of Alexandria and to have as speaker an authority on local history.

The members of the Mary Custis Lee Chapter have been so busy discussing preparations to entertain the visitors when they gather for the conclave that there has been little thought of the elections which will be held in connection with it. No candidate for State office has been put up by the hostess chapter and it is not expected that any office will come to its members. When the Virginia State D. A. R. met there, interest of the local organization centered in the candidacy of Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair for the office of State regent, to which she was subsequently elected.

Past presidents of Mary Custis Lee Chapter, who are still active in its work, include Mrs. Charles Howell, who served for 11 years, and Mrs. Charles M. Shepperson.

100 Expected For Mayflower Board Meeting

National Society Plans Sessions Here in October.

The national board of the Society of Mayflower Descendants will be entertained in Washington at its annual session October 21, 22 and 23. Plans for the event were discussed last night at a meeting of the board of the local society at which Frank B. Steele, governor, presided.

The national society holds its general convention but once in three years and always in Plymouth to commemorate the landing of the Pilgrims. The board sessions in intervening years, therefore, are events which draw many others interested in the activities of the society beside board members. Visits to places of historic note and social functions are arranged during the period of the board's meeting. These are events in which the others participate.

Headquarters here will be the Mayflower Hotel, where the first social function, a luncheon, will take place on the opening day. It will be followed October 22 by a sightseeing trip to Mount Vernon, Pohick Church and to Rippon Lodge, Va., where the Mayflower descendants will be welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis. The Ellises, now in England, will return to the Capital in September.

The night of October 22 has been set for a banquet at the Mayflower, and the following day, which will be Sunday, the members will attend a service at the Washington Cathedral.

Although there are but 25 members on the board, it is expected that more than 100 will be here for the meeting. Burton Standish Coburn, of Biltmore Forest, N. C., governor general, will preside at the business sessions. Harold G. Murray, of New York, is secretary of the organization.

Col. Branson Stoddard, of New York, a member of the board and also governor general of the National Colonial Wars Society, will be here for the session, accompanied by his wife and daughter.

Local officers, in addition to Mr. Steele, are Mrs. Bertha Robertson, deputy governor; Mrs. Brinkley Callicott, secretary, and C. Leonard Brown, treasurer.

Bedtime Stories

Sue Remembers.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Who, seeking knowledge, always tries
To train his memory is wise.
—Old Mother Nature.

Who would or could dig a hole and carry away the earth taken from it so that not a trace remained to attract attention and give away the secret of that hole? Sue tried and tried to think. It was quite by accident that she had found that hole. It was right out in the open lawn some three or four feet from the shrubbery in front of the house. Blades of grass lay over it and nearly hid it, for it was little more than an inch and a half across.

"It just doesn't seem possible," declared Sue as she showed the hole to her cousin.

Tommy's eyes were twinkling. "What doesn't seem possible?" he asked.

"That there isn't so much as a grain of sand around that hole. Why, even the tiny holes the ants make are surrounded by little piles of sand," replied Sue.

"Nevertheless, someone dug that hole, and very recently, for I am sure it wasn't there when I mowed the lawn the other day," replied Tommy.

"Tommy, you're holding out on me. You know who dug that hole," declared Sue.

"I have a pretty good idea who did it," admitted Tommy.

"Who?" Sue stamped a foot.

"Guess," replied Tommy.

"Stop teasing me, Tommy Brown. You know very well I can't guess. Tell me or I shall think you don't know," was Sue's vigorous response.

"Did you ever hear of anyone with pockets in his cheeks?" Tommy asked.

"Of course. Striped Chipmunk has pockets in his cheeks, Tommy! You don't for one minute believe that Striped Chipmunk dug this hole! He's living over under the old stone wall. You told me so yourself." Sue was growing excited.

"So he has been," replied Tommy. "Of course, even a Chipmunk is privileged to change his mind and his abode, too. If Striped Chipmunk himself didn't dig this hole, a member of his family did, or I don't know a Chipmunk's hole when I see it."

"What are you talking about?" demanded Sue.

"The answer to the riddle of what became of the dirt from that hole. He carried it away in those pockets and dumped it somewhere," replied Sammy.

"No, he didn't! No, he didn't! I've just remembered something I read or someone told me!" cried Sue, hopping up and down excitedly.

"What is it?" demanded Sammy.

"That Striped Chipmunk starts his tunnel at a place more or less hidden and, as he digs, pushes all the earth and sand out there just the same way Johnny Chuck digs his den. But Johnny Chuck uses that hole where he first digs as his main entrance and doesn't care who sees it. Striped Chipmunk uses his first hole only to throw out the earth and sand. He pushes it back along the tunnel he has dug and finally out.

"I have a pretty good idea who did it," admitted Tommy.

When he is all through digging the last thing he does is to make an entrance far from the first one, digging it open from inside. So, of course, there is no sand around it on the outside. Then the first opening where he began digging is closed. Isn't that it, Tommy?" Sue had talked so fast that she was out of breath.

Tommy nodded. "That is about the way of it," said he. "The earth and sand dug out becomes scattered and after a while there is nothing to show where the original opening was. I suspect that in this case Striped Chipmunk began work somewhere back of those bushes along the house. What he wanted an opening for way out here is beyond me."

"Perhaps he knew that no one would be likely to look for it out here," suggested Sammy.

Beginning of Perilous Journey

1 Here's the start of the inner tube swim of three soldiers down Grand Canyon's dangerous rapids that brought death to Harry Buckman, a Texan, and exposure on a narrow ledge 1,500 feet below safety for the others. This picture of two of the men with their inner tubes was made by Clyde Ryberg, who was rescued.

End of Daring Inner Tube Swim

2 Just around the bend of this, the mouth of the Grand Canyon, the three soldiers were tossed by rapid, treacherous waters into whirlpools. Buckman was lost, and Ryberg and Clarence Hansen made their way to a ledge where they were marooned. Three days were spent dropping 1,500 feet of rope for the rescue.

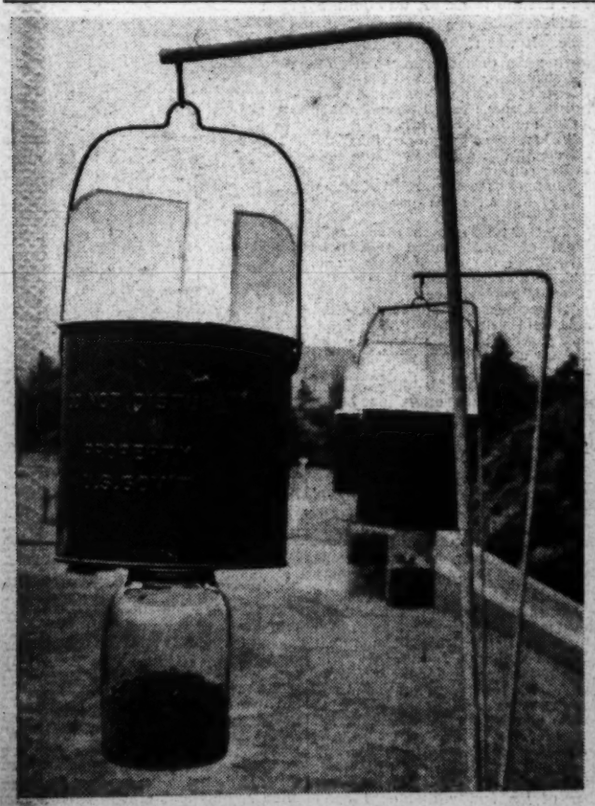
Seaboard Wages a War on Japanese Beetle



Traps for the Pests

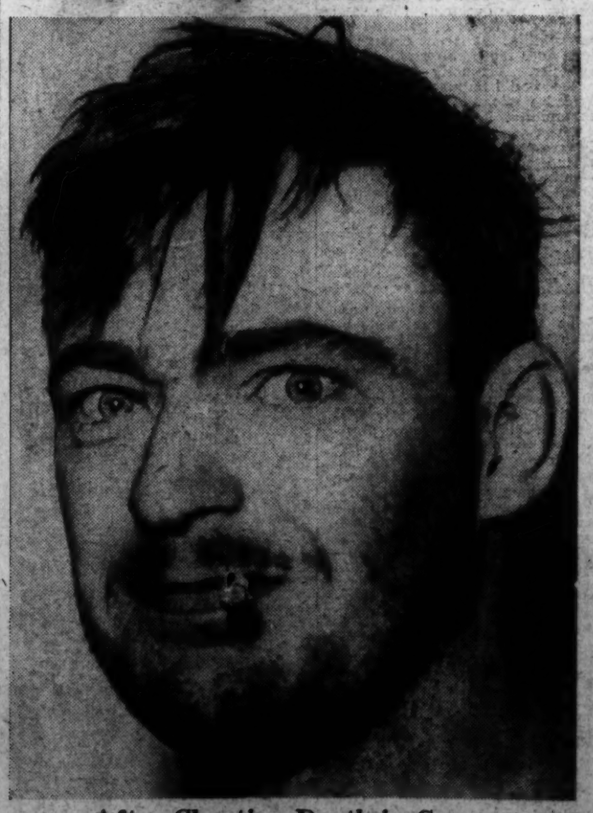
1 Back in 1916, near Riverton, N. J., the Japanese beetle was discovered in some imported nursery stock. Despite efforts to eradicate the pests, they since have spread slowly in all directions. Above are Department of Agriculture traps. The insect is attracted by a sweet fluid, then falls into a jar.

The Villain at Work

2 Japanese beetles are shown at work on a rose plant. They already have spoiled one flower, and have started on another. The pest eats and strips all forms of plant life, and is a menace to fruit growers. Hordes of the insects have invaded sections of Maryland and are threatening to spread over still wider areas.

Death By Oil

3 After the beetles drop into the glass jars, they are dumped into a tub as above and kerosene poured over them to destroy them. Scientists, still not victorious after 23 years fighting the pest since its appearance, are continuing their earnest battle for eradication.



After Cheating Death in Canyon

3 Tough as the Army makes its men, Ryberg's tired, whiskered face tells the story of the days of exposure on the canyon ledge. He and the other survivor had only a package of raisins for food.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

John L. Lewis ... No. 1 bugaboo.

On a trip across the Republic you inevitably meet scads of nice people, the kind who hate and fear Franklin Roosevelt. The fast trains, the good hotels, the smarter parties are athrob and atwitter with them . . .

They are even on the reception committees that greet the President; though some won't shake his hand. For such committees must be composed of nice people, no matter how they feel about FDR.

* * * *

It isn't quite true that they hate Mr. Roosevelt; they fear him more than they hate him . . . In fact, it's fairly well established that they rather like him. Nor is it really true that they fear him.

It isn't fear; it's a strange disquiet he fills them with like a high wind blowing day after day.

* * * *

Some of the nice people dread FDR more than others . . . He doesn't upset the professional people so much; even lawyers beyond earshot of their clients; they can be quite philosophical about him, the ones with comfortable incomes but without large pay rolls . . .

It's the men with big pay rolls, with large groups of employes in flux, and those intimately connected with them, who dread him most.

"—the sitdown, a nightmare."

There's mutiny in the fo'c'sle, there's mutiny in the factory; it boils down to that. The CIO organizer is a bugaboo, the sitdown is a nightmare, the NLRB is a banshee; and through them all glitters the Roosevelt smile . . .

On the new Roosevelt frontier it's the CIO Indians instead of the Sioux Indians, and the barb wire factory fences can't keep them out as did the wooden stockades.

* * * *

It isn't fair to call these men tories . . . Most of them think of themselves as liberals, and many of them are liberals . . . Many of the intelligent ones say this wave of reform was inevitable, and that it has gone too far to go back . . .

And they say they could endure one or two major reforms at a time, but not a half-dozen overlapping reforms coming at them from every direction at once, like so many buffalo with the face of John L. Lewis.

* * * *

After a high-ball or two, around ten-fifteen at night, many of them don't hate or dread Roosevelt quite so much . . . Their nerves are a little quieter . . . "After all, it's the new Roosevelt frontier." . . . If he would only dismount long enough to take a burr or two out from under the saddle . . . But by ten-fifteen the next morning, at their desks, they're a little jittery again.

They can't walk through the plant with the old paternal complacence—those days are gone forever . . . They wish they had peepholes in the walls and ceilings from which they could watch their faithful employes in safety—such peepholes as the Government builds into its post-offices through which inspectors can watch the men in the mailrooms.

* * * *

Some of the smart employers, gloomily aware that they can no longer hire and fire their workers and raise or lower their wages and make all those delicate adjustments it takes to keep a plant running at a profit, or running at all, see a ray of hope—profit-sharing.

Out in Chicago a special Senate Committee, under astute, practical, tireless Senator Herring, of Iowa, is investigating the various systems of profit sharing, if any.

Maybe that will work the miracle.

* * * *

Many of them wish they had thought of profit-sharing a decade ago . . . Many of them wish their men had been organized in strong, responsible, fair-minded unions long ago . . . All of them wish Mr. Roosevelt would amortize his reforms, one or two a year, and "give the cattle a chance to fatten."

This is merely a factual report of how some of the nice people feel, the nice people who are so much like the sons and cousins of FDR, by an impartial observer disguised in a clean shirt.

Woman, Boy Die; Traffic Toll Now 53

Playgrounds Are to Be Open in Effort to Keep Children Off Streets.

Jack Preston, 2 years old was killed by a truck yesterday, a woman died of injuries and another child, 9, so badly hurt by an automobile he may die. Meanwhile WPA officials announced playgrounds would be opened next week with 52 supervisors in a drive to keep children off the streets.

Ross Hawarth, acting District WPA administrator, said the supervisors would be available in a few days and would be placed in charge of the city's 13 playgrounds. District recreation officials had recommended opening the playgrounds as a means of halting the toll of traffic, which has killed seven children since schools closed last month.

One Motorist Is Held.

The dead child, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Preston, of 2308 Nichols avenue southeast, was crushed when he ran into the left rear wheel of a truck in front of his home.

The accident occurred shortly before noon. Jack had been playing across the street from his home. In his hand he clutched a red ball, given him by another child. Witnesses said the victim toddled between two parked cars, then darted beneath the truck.

The driver, Joseph Speaks, 33, of 427 Fourth street northeast, did not see his victim until after the accident. The truck was going about 15 miles an hour at the time, witnesses asserted. The driver was not held.

Jack had left the house with a little girl next door for just a moment, his mother said. She had gone inside to see if Richard, her 9-months-old baby, was sleeping soundly. When she heard a scream, she hurried to the door, in time to see Jack step directly into the side of the heavy truck.

"I saw him just as he fell," she said. Her husband is a paper hanger and a part-time taxi driver.

Injured Woman Dies.

Mary Scott, 62, of 415 Sixth street southwest, died in Casualty Hospital last night of injuries received Sunday when she was struck by an automobile operated, police said, by Robert E. Herring, 25, of 644 Independence avenue southwest. Her death brought the year's traffic toll to 53, as compared with 62 this time last year.

Another 2-year-old child, William Heflin of 1100 Seventh street southwest, suffered cuts about the head when he was flung against the windshield of his father's automobile when it collided with the District Morgue wagon on Water street between Eleventh and Twelfth streets southwest. His injuries were said not to be serious.

Frank Rollins, colored, 9, of 1121 Third street southeast, was critically injured when he was struck by a hit-run car at New Jersey avenue and M street southeast. He was taken to Providence Hospital by Albert Renner, of 139 R street northeast, where he was treated for a skull fracture.

Two hours after the boy was run down, Stephen W. Pope, colored, 35, of 812 New Jersey avenue northwest, surrendered at Fifth Precinct Station as driver of the automobile. He was held for investigation pending the outcome of the child's injuries.

Said He had "Three Beers."

The action by the coroner's jury came when Douglas H. Vincent, 22, of 1739 Nineteenth street northwest, was held for police court action in connection with the traffic death of Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, of 1308 Sixteenth street northwest, former prohibition administrator.

The verdict came after the youth's father, Merle D. Vincent, who did not witness the accident, testified his son was a "skilled, careful and deliberate driver."

The youth informed the jury he had drunk "three beers" in a cafe shortly before the accident. He did not see Maj. Dalrymple until after he felt a "thud" at Hillyer place and Connecticut avenue, he said.

Maj. Dalrymple, who was 62, died in Emergency Hospital Tuesday of injuries suffered early Sunday.

Ralph R. Winslow, cab driver, of Arlington, Va. Winslow was driver of a car which struck and injured fatally Sam Bernstein, of 2129 Eighteenth street northwest, in the 2000 block of Fourteenth street. The coroner's jury held the accident was unavoidable.

At an inquest today Robert O. Chambers, 36, colored, of 1741 T street northwest, will appear as driver of an automobile in which Howard Dent, 44, colored, of 1206 Fairmont street northwest, met his death. Dent was killed when the car crashed into a pole at Twenty-eighth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast.

David Saunders, 13, of 936 C street southwest, a Post carrier boy, suffered bruises and shock when he was struck, late yesterday, by an automobile driven by Joseph W. Cox, 21, of 908 Tenth street northwest, at Georgia avenue and Park road.

Doris May Jones, 6, colored, of 945 O street northwest, was cut, bruised and shocked when she was struck by an automobile driven by Ray E. Roth, of 4400 Thirteenth street northwest, at Tenth and O streets northwest. She was taken to Children's Hospital.

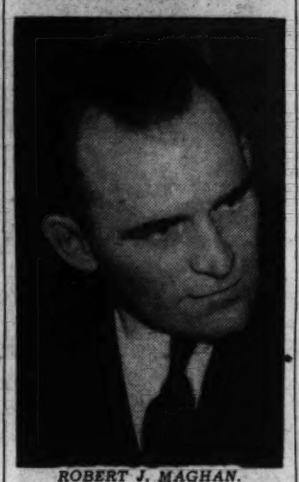
Detective Is Given Promotion Along With Two Privates

DEWEY L. GUEST.



ROBERT J. MAGHAN.

One detective was promoted to the rank of sergeant and two policemen were given the rank of detective yesterday by District Commissioners, acting upon recommendation of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Dewey L. Guest, a detective stationed at the Ninth Precinct, was promoted to succeed Detective Sergt. John C. Dalglish, who was retired because of ill health. Guest participated in a running gun battle about six months ago with a gang of three holdup men who were said to be responsible for more than 20 armed holdups in Washington.

For the past two months, Guest has been attached to the newly formed pickup squad and has worked with the crack police section in all of their major cases.

Robert J. Maghan, promoted from the rank of private to detective, was responsible for the arrest about a year ago of the "red-haired bandit," and recently has been assisting the pickup squad in raids on dope dens.

Also promoted to detective, Krell H. Davis was recommended for the advancement by Capt. J. W. Pearson of the Sixth Precinct for his efficiency and clean record.

Jeremiah C. Broderick, 57, who joined the force in 1904 as a bicycle policeman, was also retired from active duty. Commended for efficiency on several occasions, Broderick was made a detective sergeant recently.

Early this week, 240 mothers and children selected by 25 social agencies were sent to the two camps. Since the appeal for funds, 240 more have been selected and will report to camp August 9.

Law 'Joker' Raises Court Costs in D. C.

District Must Share Expense but Gets None of Revenue.

By James D. Secrest.

A legislative joker in the Justice Department supply act that will cost Washington taxpayers $81,120 when they had anticipated a saving of $250,000 was disclosed yesterday at the District Building simultaneously with a ruling by R. N. Elliott, acting comptroller general, that the Commissioners have no recourse except in remedial legislation.

The joker was found by Auditor Daniel J. Donovan in checking up on charges made on the District for the United States District Court and the Court of Appeals in the Justice appropriations. The comptroller general held that the District is not entitled to any share of the revenue of these courts although it must pay 60 per cent of the cost of operating the District Court and 30 per cent of the expenses of the Court of Appeals.

New Expenses Added.

Until this year appropriations for both courts have been carried in the District supply act entirely. The recent Congress, however, upon recommendation of the Budget Bureau and the Jacobs committee on fiscal relations split the costs between the District and the Justice Department in proportion to District-Federal business and transferred the items to the Justice bill.

When this action was announced the Commissioners rejoiced and, basing their estimates on appropriations for the courts last year, figured that the District would save $250,000 a year.

The trouble arose, however, when it was discovered that Congress had added additional Federal court expenses, which had heretofore been borne by the Justice Department, to the District budget.

The total of these amounts to $406,934 and the District's 60 per cent share to $244,180.

Proposal Is Rejected.

Included are the salaries and expenses of the United States Marshal's office, the United States Attorney's office, the pay of special attorneys in the Districts courts, salaries of District Court clerks, and fees of Commissioners in United States courts.

Hoping to offset this extra burden, the Commissioners asked the Comptroller General that the same proportional rule be applied to the revenue received by the courts and the marshal's office that now goes into the Federal coffers.

"It would seem fair and just," they said, "as the District is now going to be required to pay 60 per cent of the cost of operating the office of the clerk of the District Court and the United States marshal's office that it should be entitled to 60 per cent of the fees arising from these two offices.

"If this arrangement could be effected, it would mean a credit to the District revenues of about $90,000 a year."

This proposal was rejected by the Comptroller General and, to make matters worse, the District was deprived of nearly $10,000 a year that it has been receiving since 1937 from the clerk of the Court of Appeals. The comptroller held that all revenue of the courts belonged solely to the United States.

Congress' Rule Final.

"It appears from your submission," replied Elliott, "that the added burden upon the District appropriations is the result of action by the Congress in disregarding the recommendations of the Budget Bureau that the proportion of the expenses as were previously carried in the annual appropriations of the District.

"Such being the case and irrespective of the inequalities which may result this office may not by construction in effect nullify the apparent intention of the Congress as expressed in the statutes here in question."

The fiscal result of the juggling of Federal court costs by Congress is that whereas the District paid $474,655 to maintain both Federal courts last year with no aid from the Justice Department this year it is paying $555,575 on a percentage basis and has lost $10,000 a year it heretofore collected from the Court of Appeals.

Part of the increased cost, however, was due to the addition of three District Court judges and one justice to the Court of Appeals.

The commissioners will appeal to Congress to make amends by enacting a law that will give the District a share of the court revenue proportional to its appropriation.

"The C. I. O. then was and now is shot through with Communists and other un-American agitators. They are trying openly and boldly to take possession and control of the Democratic Party and of your country.

Dodd, in his radio duel with Representative Smith, attacked the latter's "inference" that he is backed by the C. I. O. in the hot Congressional race.

"I have not been indorsed by the C. I. O.," he said. "However, I have been indorsed by the Central Labor Union of Alexandria, an A. F. of L. affiliate, and by the railroad brotherhoods."

Smith, in concluding his speech, addressed five question to "the little group of C. I. O. purgers huddled in a certain room in Washington at this moment feverishly preparing their candidate's reply." One of the questions was:

"If he (Dodd) ever voted the Democratic ticket in the 11 years he has been of voting age, state when, where and for whom."

Dodd, who had only an hour to prepare his speech after listening to Smith, replied to that one question and promised to answer it and others "more fully" in a speech Monday evening at 6:30 o'clock.

"I am a real Roosevelt Democrat," ht said, "and I have voted the Democratic ticket."

Denies "Red" Charge.

At the outset of his speech, Representative Smith disavowed responsibility for "a newspaper article charging communistic leanings to his (Dodd's) father and sister, as well as to himself." The article, he said, was published in his absence in a distant part of the district.

Defending his Democracy, Representative Smith said he had cast 566 recorded roll call votes. Even his opponents, he said, could only find 10 out of 566 votes about which to complain.

"A little simple arithmetic," he continued, "discloses that even according to their claims my record is 98.3 per cent good. And, I never claim to be a 100 per center."

Smith denied that he had ever tried to make a deal with the White House whereby the White House would see that he had no opposition in the primary. He said that any person who made such a statement was committing "a deliberate, wilful and malicious falsehood."

Dodd, when he faced the microphone, said that the story appeared in a Washington newspaper and was "absolutely true." The story came, he said, from "a trusted member of the White House staff."

Dodd was introduced by Col. Christopher Garnett, who said he was for him because of his rich equipment for a House seat and because, once elected, he would fight for legislation to harness the waters of the Potomac and generate cheap electric power.

55 Children Are Packing Up For Camp Trip on Post Fund

Total Stands at $744; $14 Donation Sends Another Youngster.

Fifty-five children are sewing on buttons and patching up shoes and packing their grips in preparation for the biggest event of their young lives—two weeks at camp.

All 55 had given up hope of a summer vacation until this week, when the generosity of Post readers made it possible for them. They need it more than the plump, well-fed sons and daughters of Washington's rich folk, to whom several hundred dollars for a vacation at camp are no sacrifice.

But they didn't have several hundred dollars. They didn't even have $14 to pay the reduced tuition rate which local social agencies offered them.

Now their tuition will be paid from The Washington Post camp fund. Yesterday's contributions, totaling $113.23, raised the fund to $774.25, and the money is still coming in. Each additional donation of $14 will send another child to camp.

Miss Mary Edith Coulson, secretary to the recreation committee of the Council of Social Agencies, who supervised the selection of camp fund children, last night expressed gratification at the progress of the drive and made the following appeal to prospective contributors:

"Have you ever been exposed, as these children are, to the social ills of the sore spots of the Nation's capital?

"Have you ever visualized the homes these children come from?

"Have you ever evaluated the contribution a 'campship' will make in the life of a child?

"If you have not, then come with me and help choose the children. They come from broken homes, from desertion, health and behavior problems. They're not always on relief, but they are sick and need this fine therapy.

"Two weeks in camp are equal to a half-year at school. It's not dear—one dollar a day—and it starts a child on the road to life with the right ambition. Every one that has contributed a dollar has made possible one stepping stone to a future of health and happiness."

Oregon Doesn't Mean Big Ears, But Origin Stumps Smithsonian

The Smithsonian Institution admits that it is stumped on one problem. It does not know where the name Oregon came from.

Its Bureau of American Ethnology has been tracing derivations of names of American States, cities, rivers, mountains and other geographical features, especially those of Indian origin.

Some of the present-day names have passed through two or three languages and are so far from the original that it is baffling to determine the source.

So far there are three popular explanations of the etymology of Oregon, but all are certainly wrong. First is that the word is derived from the Spanish "orejon," augmentative of "oreja," ear. The word could mean three things, a big-eared person, to yank by the ear, or dried fruit. But it violates the laws of phonetics for Oregon to be derived from it.

An absurd derivation is from the Spanish "horcan," a hurricane. The third explanation is that it was derived from O'Regan, supposed name of an early trader. But a search of records of trading companies fails to reveal such a name.

Dr. John P. Harrington, of the bureau, believes that the name is of Indian origin and came from Indian or Indian jargon into English more than 150 years ago. Its phonetics are "good Indian." He expects search of Indian languages to solve the problem.

League Asks Suit Against Doctors' Unit

Pine Asked to Institute Quo Warranto Proceedings.

Group Health Reports Progress in Drive for Hospital.

The District Medical Society, set back Wednesday by a court decision upholding the legality of Group Health Association, was placed on the defensive anew yesterday when District Attorney David A. Pine was asked to institute proceedings against the society for its anti-G. H. A. activities.

Pine said late yesterday he had turned over to Harry L. Underwood, his chief assistant, the formal complaint presented by the Washington League for Co-operative Medical Service.

Other developments yesterday on the "socialized medicine" front included an invitation by the Southwest Citizens Association to have the G. H. A. build its proposed hospital in that section of the Capital; a statement by William C. Kirkpatrick, association president, that the hospital project will go forward, and reliable reports that the Department of Justice will have something to say in a few days about its investigation of the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society.

Edwards Signs Complaint.

A. C. Edwards, an employe of the Agriculture Department and secretary-treasurer of the Washington League of Co-operative Medical Service, signed the complaint which was sent to Pine. He explained that the league is a voluntary group "composed of some 60 persons, residents of the District of Columbia, most of whom are officers of the Government."

The medical society was accused of excluding G.H.A. staff physicians from use of local hospital facilities "which the society has come to control;" refusing to allow its members to have professional relations with the "taboo" doctors, and otherwise acting in restraint of trade.

Areas' Facilities Cited.

Pine was requested to bring a quo warranto action against the officers and executive committee of the society "on the ground that they are exercising corporate privileges not granted them by the laws in force in the District."

In a letter to Kirkpatrick, Harry S. Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association, pointed out that that area is being gradually rehabilitated and urged that a site in that section be considered.

Kirkpatrick said encouraging progress is being made on raising funds, by assessment of the membership, to repay the $40,000 grant.

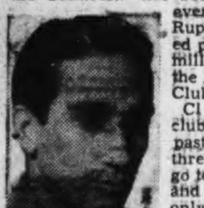
Indian Smoke Signals.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 29.—Among other things which they can give back to the Indians with the approval of the bulk of the American people is the American League pennant. The race has resolved itself into a fight between the Yankees and the Cleveland Club with every other team almost hopelessly outdistanced, and, between that pair, a Cleveland victory would be the more popular.

The Yankees' domination of league affairs for the past two years has proved more than a bit irksome to fandom in general. And Cleveland hasn't won the pennant since Tris Speaker and big Jim Bagby brought 'em a flag in 1920. "Beat the Yankees!!" has been the cry ever since Col. Ruppert started pouring his millions into the New York Club in 1919.



POVICH.

Cleveland clubs in the past have threatened to go to the front and stay there only to collapse dismally at the halfway point. But this year there is no disposition to laugh off the Indians' threat. With the season advanced far beyond the stage of their usual folding act, the Indians are still up there only a game behind the leading Yankees, and showing no signs of quitting.

In fact, the schedule is very much in favor of Oscar Vitt's club. If the Indians do win, they will win with a nod to the schedule makers, who last winter fixed it up very nicely for the Indians. At a tremendous advantage when playing in their own park, the Indians are scheduled to play their last 25 games of the season at home, while the Yankees are on the road.

A Home Club.

The figures thus far are extremely interesting. In 40 games played on their home grounds, the Indians have won 31, lost only 9. That adds up to .775 ball on their home lot. The Cleveland club is peculiarly built to fit the Cleveland park, what with its slew of left-handed hitters—Averill, Trosky, Heath, Campbell and Weatherly—eternally aiming at the short rightfield wall.

Only two clubs—Washington and the Tigers—have been able to win more than one game from the Indians at Cleveland this season. And they have won only two each. The rest—the Yankees, A's, Browns, White Sox and Red Sox—have won only a single game in Cleveland's bandbox park.

Thus far the Indians are pursuing the correct formula for winning the pennant. They are licking the hide off their chief challenger—the Yankees—and showing no mercy to the tail end clubs.

In 11 games with the Yankees, the Indians have won seven. As recently as the Eastern club's last invasion of the West, the Indians showed their fortitude by licking the Yankees three straight times in a four game series with the league leadership at stake.

"It's nice to beat the leading clubs," the late John McGraw once said, "but the way to win pennants is to lick the tar out of those second division teams. That's where a club makes its big gains, knocking off those soft touches with great regularity."

Well, the Indians have been following McGraw's advice almost to the letter. In addition to gaining a huge edge over the Yankees in their 11 games, they have been consistently walloping the second division teams. They have licked the Athletics 13 times in 16 games and have taken 7 out of 9 games with the Browns. It adds up to 20 victories for the Indians in 25 games with the Browns and A's.

BOBBY FELLER.

A disappointment, eh?

If the pennant race resolves itself into a question of pitching in the late stages, then Manager Vitt can console himself with the fact that he has the absolute best pitching staff in the league. The sensational Johnny Allen has lost only three games in two seasons while amassing more than 30 wins, and young Bob Feller has 11 victories to his credit against only five defeats this year.

Hey! Harder's Back.

But the most reassuring item of all for Vitt is the startling comeback of Mel Harder. The spare-ribbed right-hander who for years was Cleveland's best pitcher was destined for relief duty only a month ago when his effectiveness strangely deserted him. But within the past three weeks Harder has magically regained all his old skill and checked in with three of the most impressive victories of the season.

If Cleveland doesn't win the pennant it will be a terrific blow to the local populace. The excitement here as the Indians continue to stay within whispering distance of the Yankees is intense. In the store windows photographic displays of the Cleveland players abound. Every minor scratch suffered by a Tribesman is first-page news in the papers. Within a stone's throw from long relief lines at the social agencies are long lines of ticket buyers seeking reservations for the big games. Anything less than the pennant will be a terrific letdown for Cleveland.

Giants Nose Out Cincinnati, 5-4, On Mancuso's Hit in the Ninth

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 29.—The Giants came to life at the plate today and hosed out the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 4, to win their second game in a row and stretch their winning "streak" to two straight, after five consecutive losses.

Stymied by Johnny Vander Meer with one run for six innings, Giants hopped on the no-hit sensation at the same time in the seventh to score 3 runs on homers by Bob Seeds and Mel Ott. In the ninth, with Gene Schott pitching, the bases loaded and two out, Gus Mancuso singled the winning run across.

Pirates Defeat Dodgers, 7-6

Brooklyn, July 29 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates scored five runs in one inning today, kicked that lead away, and then nipped the Dodgers, 7 to 6, for their third win in a row to remain five games in front in the National League pennant chase.

The victory evened the season series between the two clubs at seven wins apiece. Previously, the Dodgers had been the only outfit in the loop boasting an edge over the blazing Bucs.

Except for Pep Young, who clouted three-for-three for the Pirates, and Cookie Lavagetto, whose three-run homer featured the Dodgers' attack, the heat gave pitchers of both sides more trouble than the batters. The Bucs used four flingers, with Joe Bowman getting credit for the win.

Each side scored five runs in the fourth frame. The Pirates got under way on Johnny Rizzo's single. Arky Vaughan's double scored him, and Al Todd's base hit sent Vaughan home. Young singled and Brandt beat out a bunt to load the bases. After Tot Pressnell relieved Luke Hamlin, Gilly Campbell's error let another run in, a walk forced the fourth marker across, and Gus Suhr's fly counted the fifth.

Man of the Month

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

Sammy West, the only man among them to collect more than one of the Nats' eight hits off Johnny Allen yesterday, draws down the biggest share of points in the latest Man of the Month contest award.

To West, three points, because at one point, when the Nats had made only four hits, West had made two of them.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, because he hit a home run over the rightfield wall in the eighth.

To George Case, two points, because he made the Nats' first run possible by swatting a single in the sixth inning and stealing second.

To Buddy Myer, two points, because he drove in a run with his single in the ninth.

Loose Play Helps Yanks Win by 4-3

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 29.—The White Sox's butter-fingers did a little more damage than the Yankees' today, and the New Yorkers came through with a 4-to-3 victory to remain a game in front in the American League race.

Each side committed three errors to ruin an otherwise tight pitching duel in which Lefty Gomez took the second decision in a week over Southpaw Thornton Lee. Last Sunday, in New York, Lee tossed a two-hitter at the World Champions, but lost because of similar loose fielding.

In today's tilt, three of the Yankee tallies, including the deciding marker in their two-run winning rally in the ninth, were unearned. Gomez ran into similar tough luck, but only in one inning—the fourth, when the Sox scored their first run on one hit and a pair of errors.

Hero of the encounter was Myril Hoag, whose single with two aboard in the ninth broke up the ball game. This hit sent one run home to break a tie, and when Mike Kreevich threw wild from the outfield, the second score came across.

The Yanks broke the scoring ice in the second with a run on Joe DiMaggio's single, Boze Berger's two-base wild heave, and Bill Dickey's fly. After the Sox tied it up in the fourth, the Yanks went ahead again in the fifth when Joe Gordon bunted safely, advanced on Lee's fumble of Gomez's sacrifice, and scored on an infield out.

The Sox tied it up again in the sixth on singles by Hank Steinbacher and Rip Radcliff, and Luke Appling's long fly.

Greenberg Hits Pair Of Homers, Tigers Win

Detroit, July 29 (AP).—Hammering Hank Greenberg, Detroit's first baseman, kept ahead of Babe Ruth's record home run pace with two circuit blows, driving in four runs, as the Tigers beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 9 to 2, in the series opener here today.

It was the Tigers' sixth consecutive victory, as they extended their longest winning streak of the season. Elden Auker, Detroit submarine ball hurler, went the route for his eighth victory.

Greenberg hit his thirty-fourth homer off Almon Williams with none on base to tie the score at 2-all in the fourth inning. His thirty-fifth came in the eighth off the delivery of Relief Pitcher Nelson Potter, with two mates aboard. Charley Gehringer hit his twelfth homer for Detroit in the first inning.

Paul Waner Picks Pirates for Flag

New York, July 29 (AP).—It must be coming to pass, because Paul Glee Waner says so.

Paul says the Pittsburgh Pirates are going to win the National League pennant with a comfortable margin so they can get an old-fashioned American League rest for the World Series, and when Paul rears himself to such a forecast it must be the real McCoy because he's one of the best informed and most cautious men in the game when it comes to predictions.

"I figure we'll win," said Paul as he and his roaring Pirate mates came to town for the Brooklyn series. "This team is smoother than our last pennant winner back in '27. We'll look terrible some days but we've got the power, steadiness and class to come back the next two or three. We should have a big enough margin to get a few days' rest before meeting those major leaguers."

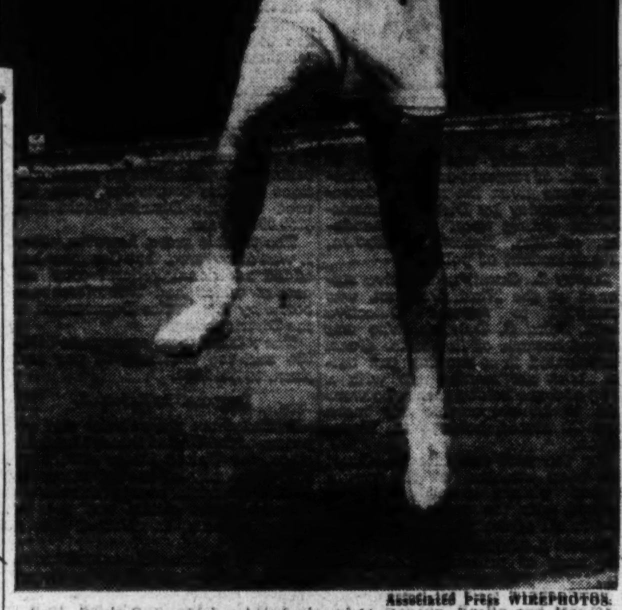
Mexican Is Beaten . . . A Stitch in Time . . . Australian Wins



Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

With Davis Cup matches being played in Canada, Berlin and Kansas City and with the Sea Bright tournament going full swing, the sports world is literally nuts over the nets. Upper left, Daniel Hernandez, Mexico's No. 1 tennis player, was defeated yesterday by Adrian Quest (upper right), Australia's ace. They met in the opening of the international Davis Cup play at Kansas City. Upper center, Dorothy May Bundy, famous daughter of a famous mother, relaxes with her knitting between sets at Sea Bright. Lower, rising star is Virginia Wolfenden, 20-year-old San Franciscan, a part-time secretary. She met Alice Marble yesterday at Sea Bright.

Bees Defeat Cards, 2 to 1

Garms' Single in Sixth Scores 2, Wins Game.

Boston, July 29.—The St. Louis Cardinals allowed only two Boston players to reach third base today, but both Bees scored and trimmed the Redbirds, 2 to 1.

Deb Garms laced out a single in the sixth to score Johnny Lanning and Vince DiMaggio. Lanning reached first when Don Padgett dropped his hit and DiMaggio walked. The Cards deprived Lanning of a shutout in the ninth, scoring on two doubles by Ducky Medwick and Don Gutteridge.

The Cards started like a house afire, but double plays in the first and second frames pulled Lanning out of tight spots. He gave five hits the first three innings, but only three in the last six.

Anschluss Brings Net Results! Germans Tie With Yugoslavia

But It Takes Von Metaxa, a Viennese, to Do It; Japan Davis Cup Doubles Team Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 29.—Thanks to Adolf Hitler's Austrian coup, Germany's Davis Cup tennis forces were all square with Yugoslavia tonight after the first two singles matches of the European zone finals.

Germany's top-ranking ace, hard-hitting Henner Henkel, was soundly beaten by Ferenc Puncec in the opening match, 6—1, 7—5, 6—3, but Georg Von Metaxa, a Viennese, gave the teutons an even split by outlasting Josip Pallada in a marathon duel, 1—6, 6—4, 6—1, 3—6 12—10.

Metaxa, a member of the former Austrian team, was recruited for German Davis Cup duty after Austria lost its entity in the Hitler Coup of March 13.

The doubles will be played tomorrow and the final two singles matches Sunday. The winner will qualify to meet the winner of the American zone finals. The eventual survivor will gain the right to meet the United States in the challenge round.

Aussies Take Lead In Davis Cup Play

Kansas City, July 29 (AP).—Australia won both its Davis Cup zone matches here today without dropping a set to its shorter and less experienced Mexican opponents.

Adrian Quist, veteran of five previous Cup campaigns, toyed with Daniel Hernandez, 6—1, 7—5, 6—4, in the first match, while John Bromwich defeated Eugenio Tapia, Mexico's court-covering freshman, 6—4, 6—4, 6—4.

Quist won as he pleased, except in the second set when Hernandez used his backhand effectively to win the seventh, eight and ninth games to take a temporary 5-to-4 game lead. In the opening set, the stocky Mexican broke Quist's service at the outset, then was helpless the remainder of the way as the Australian captured the next six games, three of them at love.

The barrel-chested Mexican took four of the first six games in the final set before the Australian resumed his drive. A clean placement ended the struggle.

Bromwich, Australia's two-fisted stroker, didn't remove the towel from around his neck until Tapia had made the score 4 games to 3 in the final set of the day's concluding match.

Tapia, making his debut in international circles, found little difficulty in solving Bromwich's unorthodox style. He won two of the

The race to decide a successor to Freddy Mesmer, deposed Georgetown University basketball coach, has narrowed to two parties, insist those close to the school . . . They are Elmer Ripley, former Hoya mentor and one of the smartest basketball men in the country, and Eddie Hargaden, present coach of Georgetown Prep and one of G. First, his salary demands would not be near so high as those of Ripley, who is drawing heavy sugar as a good-will ambassador for Spalding's . . . Jurges' Error in Twelfth Decides Game.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 29.—Uncorking a three-run rally in the ninth to tie the score, the Phillies went on to win, 5 to 4, over the Chicago Cubs in 12 innings here today.

An error by Shortstop Jurges gave the Phillies the winning run. With two out Jurges missed Klein's hard grounder. Jordan scored from second.

Two Cub pitchers, Lee and French, were sent to the showers by the Phillies' ninth-inning spree.

John Allen Hits Homer And Double

Holds Nationals to Only 8 Hits for His 13th Victory.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, July 29.—The Nats' pitchers continued the evil tenor of their ways this afternoon, throwing three home runs, a pair of triples and various other species of hits at the Cleveland Indians.

It all added up to the Nats' fourth straight defeat in the West—another one of those 12-to-4 games in which the Nats' role smacked of stooging for the local prides.

The last measure of ignominy befell the Nats' pitching in the fourth inning. That was when Johnny Allen, Cleveland pitcher, came to the plate with two pals on base and raised his home run output to a grand total of one for the season by belting his ball into the left field bleachers.

Allen Clouts Homer.

Elon Hogsett was the victim of that very unpitcher-like swat by Allen, but Harry Kelley topped Hogsett for the home run dishonors. Coming into the game in the fifth inning, he pitched a home run to Hal Trosky almost immediately and in the sixth inning, he did it all over again.

Those three homers accounted for six Cleveland runs and accounted also for most of the terrific shrieking of the 15,000 ladies' day fans who left the dishes in the sink and came out to see their heroes who are hot on the heels of the Yankees for the league lead.

Johnny Allen's thirteenth pitching victory of the season was a soft touch for the temperamental Cleveland right hander. He shut the Nates out for five innings while the Indians were compiling an 8-0 lead. He eventually gave up eight hits to the Nats, but two were infield affairs and two others were pop flies that eventuated as hits when they popped out of infielders' gloves.

Indians Start in Third

It was something of a contest for two innings and then the Indians broke the scoreless tie. Slugger Allen launched a two-run assault against Hogsett in the third and raced to third base when Hogsett fumbled Lary's sacrifice bunt. Campbell's single and an infield out drove the runs across.

Hogsett encountered a pair of singles by Trosky and Pytlak before he met up with Allen in the fourth inning and the pitcher's swat into the bleachers raised the Indians' lead to 5-0. But they didn't stop there. Hogsett issued a couple of passes and Heath walloped a double against the rightfield wall to bring in two more runs during the inning.

After Kelley had contrived to bring the Indians' lead to 8-0 in the fifth, the Nats went out and got a run—no fooling. They got it when Case singled, stole second and scored on a pair of infield outs.

Nats Get Eight Hits.

Piqued at Allen's loss of his shutout bid, the Indians came right back in the same inning and spanked Kelley for four more runs. Campbell hit a single, Hale tripled over West's head, Heath hit a single and then Mr. Trosky thumped his fourteenth homer of the year over that rightfield wall.

That made it 12-1.

The Nats piled six of their eight hits into the last four innings, scoring a run in each, but their only worthwhile hit of these proceedings was a homer by Buddy Lewis who lashed the ball over that rightfield fence in the eighth and cut the Indians' lead to 12-3. The Nats weren't very impressive in making their last run. Travis' pop fly was dropped by Heath and eventuated as a two-base hit, and he scored from third when Budy Myer beat out a tap to Lary.

As a whole, the Nats were pretty awful.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

Merrily We Roll Along.

The story of the lady linesman in a tennis match at Buffalo comes from Hames Holbrook, of Brooklyn. He says that in the semifinals of a women's tournament on the Dunlop courts they were short one official, half a dozen or more being necessary when a couple of people are playing tennis, if it is to look important. So one of the fair spectators was asked to serve.

VIDMER.

She took her place in a chair at one of the service lines and seemed intent on her responsibilities, but the match went on, with several close calls, and, strange as it may seem, not a word was spoken by the lady linesman. Suddenly the umpire realized he wasn't getting much help from that source and called a halt to the match. Looking down from his high chair of authority and frowning severely, he said:

The lady arose, and with an indignant manner marched over to where the official was seated, then dramatically pointing at the service stripe, she asked:

"Is that the line I'm supposed to be watching?"

"Well," she said with a toss of her head and a triumphant ring in her voice, "I've been watching it and not a single ball has hit it yet!"

Slapsie Maxie.

Perhaps it was the announcement that Bob Pastor had departed for the Coast to fight Maxie Rosenbloom, whom the oldest inhabitants may remember as a former light heavyweight champion, but whom the younger generation will know only as a bit player in pictures.

Anyway, it must have been the mention of Maxie's name in connection with boxing—after all these years—that recalled a time when he was in his prime and working out vigorously in Stillman's Gym.

Maxie was beating a beautiful tatoo with the punching bag as he went about his training, when he was interrupted by a message that he was wanted on the telephone.

"Tell 'em I'm busy," Maxie said without missing a beat with the bag.

But in a few moments the agent returned and said it was very important.

"O. K. Wait a minute," said Maxie, still punching the bag as he glanced about the gym. Suddenly he called to another fighter standing near by. "Hey, Butch, do me a favor, willya? Come over here and punch this bag for me a coupla minutes. I gotta go to the phone."

Take It Easy!

Which isn't any dummer than the complaint registered by Hawley Peterson's partner in a golf match not long ago. It might be mentioned that the former Yale oarsman hits a golf ball quite a distance, bringing forth audible gasps of admiration every time he lays into a tee shot.

But opponents have found that the only way to make up for those tremendous drives is to needle him a little, tell him what a long ball he can hit and get him to try to hit them even farther, with the usual disastrous results.

But in a match not long ago, his partner was familiar with these methods and kept cautioning him to take it easy. Still, Pete was hitting the ball a mile or more, and finally he hit one that nobody saw at all. There was a search for it by all members of the foursome without any results.

A wry look came over his partner's face and in an exasperated voice he whined: "I knew that was going to happen some time! Why didn't you listen to me and just take it easy?"

Alibi Ike.

And then there is the tale that Al Schacht tells about an Alibi Ike that used to be with the Washington Club when Al was there as a coach.

"Our bunt sign was flesh-to-flesh," Al relates. "You know, rubbing your hand on your forehead, or touching your neck. And, of course, answered it the same way. Well, one time this Alibi Ike was on third base and Joe Judge gave him the bunt sign for the squeeze play. But he didn't get an answer. So Joe walked out of the box, calling the whole thing off. Later, in the dressing room, I asked this guy if he knew he missed the signal for a squeeze, and right away he said:

"'Sure you did,' I said. 'Judge gave you the squeeze sign when you were on third in the eighth. You never answered him.'

"'I answered him,' he says. 'I gave him the flesh-to-flesh answer, but he called it off.'

"'How did you give it?" I asked him.

Griffith and Pros Help Launch Driving Range

Clark Griffith, ball club prexy, and several professional mashie manipulators from nearby golfing pastures will be on hand tonight to help Brook Grubb launch his driving range at 7 o'clock. The range is located near Montgomery Hills, about three miles beyond the Silver Spring traffic light on Georgia avenue.

In addition to a driving contest Grubb has scheduled a pony race to entertain the first-night audience.

2 Unknowns Share Lead On First Day

Coggin, Harrison and Stuhler to Set Pace in $7,500 Play.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Minn., July 29.—The Nation's fairway aces, with "dark horses" matching the marksmanship of favorites, gave par a merciless, first-rouund bombing in the $7,500 St. Paul open golf tournament today.

Thirty players clipped strokes off the 36-36—72 par of the rolling Keller course for a new, first-round record of sub-par scoring in the tourney's nine-year history. Fifteen more played par golf to bolster their chances of continuing in the title fight through another 18 holes tomorrow and Sunday's 36-hole final grind.

Best Nine of Day.

All had brilliant, birdie-strewn 67s with the diminutive, 23-year-old Stuhler carding the finest nine of the day—32. He came home in 35. One under regulation figures. Harrison—whose opening round 67 in the Chicago open was "washed out" by a storm, and Goggin, runner-up to Sam Snead last year, made the two trips in 34-33.

A stroke off the fast pace—which had many players predicting the 72-hole total would crack Harry Cooper's record of 271 for the event—were Harry Bassler, of Long Beach, Calif.; Bill Kaiser, of Louisville, and the "Silver Scot," Tommy Armour, of Chicago.

In the 69 bracket, 3 under par, were Art Doering, of Chicago, low amateur; Clarence Yockey, Kansas City; Joe Coria, St. Paul; Henry Ransom, of Bryan, Tex.; Tony Manero, Peabody, Mass.; Lloyd Mangrum, Los Angeles; Pat Sawyer, Birmingham, Mich.; Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., and Cooper, three-time winner of the event.

Lawson Little Has 70.

Among those who carded 70s under the blazing sun were Lawson Little, of San Francisco; Gene Sarazen, Brookfield Center, Conn.; Ray Mangum, Oakmont, Pa., and Tony Penna, Dayton, Ohio.

The 71 roster included Webb Gilbert, Topeka, Kans.; Charley Sheppard, San Francisco; Herman Keiser, Springfield, Mo.; Bill Heinlein, of Indianapolis; big Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, and Al Krueger, of Beloit, Wis.

The Money Is on Nedomatsky—But Sentiment Backs Mamakos

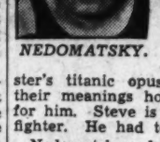
By Lewis F. Atchison.

Ivan Nedomatsky and his jolting right hook will be a pronounced financial favorite when he steps out and cracks Steve Mamakos on the jaw for the first time in their eight-round bout Monday night at the ball park, but Mamakos will be a sentimental hope with the crowd.

Ivan, you see, is a college bred battler, a slick-haired smoothy who says "ain't" only in temporary lapses of memory, who eats with his fork, graduated from the University of Maryland and some day hopes to be a doctor.



NEDOMATSKY.

Steve, by contrast, didn't even get an eighth-grade diploma. The kid had to get out and hustle for the necessities of life. The only college life he's seen has been through the window of a transient bus and Mr. Webster's titanic opus on words and their meanings hold little interest for him. Steve is strictly a street-fighter. He had to be.

Nedomatsky admits he's fighting to earn enough money to pay for his tuition, books and other incidental expenses at medical school. He happens to like boxing, and happens to own a murderous right hook and better-than-average left hook—a happy combination.

His older brother is a professional punch trader, and long before Ivan was weaned was working at his trade uunder the name of Jimmy Jones. Jones is a tough lad, and from meeting all comers has accumulated a fine repertoire of tactics. He took Ivan in hand early and instructed him in the fundamentals of boxing. When Ivan packed his week-end bag and migrated to Maryland, he came under the expert tutelage of Capt. John Harmony, a masterful boxer, and later Heine Miller, who is also familiar with the sport.

Mamakos, meanwhile, started battling over space in the sandbox. Later on he had to put up his dukes to defend himself from the taunts of the neighborhood gang. He had to fight for his very existence, and he wasn't a petted, pampered idol. He was merely one of a crowd of youngsters to whom fighting wasn't a pastime or sport, but a hard, bruising business.

Steve never had the coaching Ivan has received. The only instructions or advice ever whispered in his ears was to "get out there and punch!" He wasn't told or shown how to slip punches, sidestep or duck inside. What little ducking he does experience has taught him to do.

And Mamakos, like Nedomatsky, wants to earn money, too. He wants to improve his station in life and as yet has not realized a good pay day, as they say in the fight game. His average purse has amounted to $75. Frequently he worked for less—much less. Last year as a sparring partner for Lou Gevinson he earned five bucks and a pat on the back for some 18 rounds of fisticuffing. Now he's sick of it. He wants to make some real money and make it quick.

Ivan wants to go to school, and Steve wants to—you guessed it, open up a first-class restaurant. Sure, it's long hours and hard work, but so is his life as a tinsmith's helper. And then again, you're your own boss. It's much easier to punch a cash register than some mug who keeps moving out of range. And cash registers have never been known to hit back.

Yes, the fans' greenbacks will be riding on Nedomatsky Monday, but their hearts will be with the Greek kid with the big heart.

Greyhound Race Victor

By the Associated Press.

Agawam, Mass., July 29.—Greyhound, world trotting champion, waltzed off with the American free-for-all trot here today in the feature event of the Grand Circuit racing program at Agawam Park.

Trotting amazingly well over a slow track, the gray gelding, owned by the Baker Stables, of St. Charles, Ill., covered the last quarter mile in 27¼ seconds, only one-half second off his world record time made July 4 at Cleveland.

Rosalind, like Greyhound a former winner of the Hambletonian, gave the champion strong contention in each heat, but was unable to match strides with the fleet "gray ghost" in the stretch. The race carried a purse of $3,100.

Billy Direct, pacing champion, won the Pittsfield free-for-all pace, defeating Little Pat in straight heats. The final heat was rained out, as was the final heat of the classified pace.

World Track Mark Broken

By the Associated Press.

Gothenburg, Sweden, July 29.—Ray Malott, of Stanford University, and the San Francisco Olympic Club, chief record breaker of the American track and field team touring Sweden, smashed a world record that had stood for four years when he had 500 meters in 1:1.5 on the second day of a two-day international meet here.

Outside of Mallott's feat, the Americans got only an even break in their four events today, after winning five out of six yesterday. Fred Wolcott, of Rice Institute, won the 110-meter high hurdles in 14.2 seconds, and George Varoff, of Oregon, took the pole vault at 4 meters (13 feet 1 5-32 inches On an extra trial he cleared the bar at 4.22 meters (13 feet 9 13-16 inches).

Sorlie, of Norway, won the discus throw with 47.38 meters (155 feet 5 25-64 inches). Pete Zagar, Stanford teammate of Malott, placed fourth with 46.22 meters (151 feet 7 23-32 inches). Rock Hall, Md., July 29 (A.P.).—Fishermen, who pride themselves on the size of their catches and their ability to lure their finny prey by calling to them, are preparing for the annual Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair grand contest here, August 27 and 28.

Thirty trophies will be presented to the champions in different classes and a total of 100 prizes will be awarded.

Oddest amusement contest will be the "fish-calling contest," with all the variety of individual interpretations of what sound, if any, appeals to a wary fish.

The Whirlwinds, who won the first half of the City League with eight victories and two defeats, clinched the second half grind with a 17-3 victory over the Voice of Labor. That victory, coupled with the Elks' 3-0 setback at the hands of the Boys' Club, decided the grind.

Two Jockeys Hurt At Bel Air Track

Bel Air, Md., July 29.—Caught in a jam soon after the start of the day's fourth race, Beverly Hacker, America's eleventh leading winning rider, suffered an injured arm which caused him to cancel his remaining mounts for the day.

In the day's steeplechase, Atoll, after falling at the first fence, followed his field for a mile and a half where he crashed into Chatter, both horses hitting the turf, their riders escaping injury.

Three-quarters of the seventh saw Judith B. falling at the stretch turn. Landsman, Timepiece and Darling Pat fell over the mare. However, all riders except Skeets Holland, colored, who rode Landsman, escaped injury. Holland, according to attending physicans, suffered a broken arm.

Bobby Riggs and Elwood Cooke Gain Final Round at Seabright

Miss Marble, Bundy Also Reach Final

Play for Title Tomorrow; Riggs Extended to Beat Kovacs.

By the Associated Press.

Sea Bright, N. J., July 29. Top-seeded Bobby Riggs, defending champion, and unseeded Elwood Cooke, dapper stylist from Portland, Oreg., moved into the final round of the Sea Bright Invitation tennis tournament today.

Riggs, who captured his first leg on the historic Sea Bright Bowl last year when Wilmer Allison defaulted in the final, came through as expected today to bowl over lanky Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., 4—6, 6—3, 6—2, 6—0. Allison's hopes for a shot at Riggs died when he was out-steadied by Cooke, 6—3, 6—4, 6—3, in the other semifinal match.

Alice Marble, women's champion here for the past two years, gained the final round again by scoring 6—4, 6—4 over unseeded Virginia Wolfenden, of San Francisco. Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., the second-seeded player, conquered her Wightman Cup teammate, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, 7—5, 6—4.

Marble vs. Bundy.

Miss Marble faces Miss Bundy for the championship Sunday, marking the first time in the 51-year history of the competition that a tournament match has been scheduled on the Sabbath.

Kovacs, 18-year-old giant who eliminated John McDiarmid, Ernie Sutter and Bitsy Grant en route to the semifinal bracket, rallied to win the opening set from Riggs after trailing in the early stages. His hard smashes were nicking the baselines and it was not until Riggs softened his own game in the second set that he was able to cope with Kovac's raking shots.

After losing the opening set to the surprisingly steady Cooke, Allison bounded into a 4—1 lead in the second as he stormed the net with a series of smashing volleys. Cooke never gave up, however, and broke service in the seventh and ninth game to take the lead.

Allison Ebbs.

Allison, netting volleys with annoying consistency in the third set, trailed 3—5 in the third set, then saved the ninth game with two remarkable cross-court shots. Cooke took the next game and the match on his own service.

While Miss Marble was not pressed to win against her 18-year-old foe, Miss Wolfenden had the satisfaction of capturing eight games—four more than three former opponents of the top-seeded star, were able to aggregate among them. The unheralded young Californian led 3—1 in the first set and 2—0 in the second.

The match between Miss Bundy, seeded second in the tournament, and Mrs. Fabyan, rated a notch below, was evenly contested throughout. Mrs. Nabyan led, 5—4, in the first set and appeared to have it well in hand, but Miss Bundy came to the net to stave off her bid. The next two games went to the Californian and she pulled out a ding-dong second set after holding match point four times.

He tired rapidly in the final set, but revived enough to take four games in a row after Bromwich had taken the first three. Bromwich's match winning shot was a beautiful placement deep to the Mexican youngster's backhand.

Both countries will rely on the same players tomorrow in the doubles.

The winner of three of the five matches here will meet Japan, victor over Canada, in the American zone final early next month.

Japan Outclasses Canadian Cuppers

Montreal, July 29 (U.P.).—Japan's veteran two-man Davis Cup team clinched a berth in the North American zone final today by outclassing Canada in the doubles match for a 3-0 lead in the best of five series.

Ross Wilson and Laird Watt, Canadian representatives, were not in the same class with Jiro Yamagishi, singles champion of Japan, and his regular doubles partner, Fumiteru Nakano, although they did extend the Nippon netmen to four sets before bowing 6—3, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5. The doubles triumph followed yesterday's two singles victories, sending Japan into the zone final against the winner of the Mexico-Australia series, which began in Kansas City, Mo., today.

Tomorrow's singles matches between Bob Murray, Canada's No. 1 ranking player, and Nakano and Wilson's match against Yamagishi will be mere exhibitions.

The North America zone final between Japan and the Mexico-Australia winner will be played here August 11-13, the victor meeting the European zone titlist for the right to challenge the United States for the coveted tennis trophy.

Tennis Title To Williams

Dorothy Kibler Beaten in Straight Sets.

In her last eligible year of playground tennis, blonde 19-year-old Harriet Williams yesterday realized a fond ambition by defeating Dorothy Kibler in straight sets at Chevy Chase to win the D. C. Women's championship. The scores were 6—2, 6—0.

Displaying a well-rounded game predicated on a smashing forehand and an accurate service, the attractive Holton Arms graduate, wore down Miss Kibler and defeated her far more decisively than even her most rabid rooters predicted.

Miss Williams succeeds Lucille McDowell as playground titleholder, but, as her predecessor did this year, must relinquish her crown next season when she will be over age.

Kathryn Hemphill In Finals Today

Asheville, N. C., July 29 (AP).—Kathryn Hemphill of Columbia, S. C., the medalist, eliminated Marion Miley of Lexington, Ky., the Southern champion, 3 and 1, today in the semi-finals of the Biltmore Forest Invitation golf tournament.

In tomorrow's 36-hole final Miss Hemphill will face Sally Guth of St. Louis who defeated Alliene Hoover of Thomasville, 5 and 4, this morning.

'Judge' Connie Mack 'Punishes' a Drunk

Detroit, July 29 (U.P.).—Connie Mack, Philadelphia Athletics' manager, sat on the bench with Judge John P. Scallen, his old friend, listening to police cases and eventually was asked to sentence a few.

Mack listened to Jack Berry, 38, found on a park bench with a bottle of rum.

"I know you, Mr. McGillicuddy," the defendant said. "I used to be a bat boy for Ty Cobb." The judge interrupted a long baseball chat between Mack and Berry with a demand for sentence.

"Make him see my team play," Mack suggested. "That's the worst sentence that could be imposed by any mun."

Justice was done.

Boss, as long as you won't give me a vacation—I thought I'd bring the family down here!

Corning Ace Romps Home In Spa Race

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 29.—Thanksgiving, a bay son of Bud Lerner that has carried Mrs. Parker Corning's silks into the money in seven of his nine starts this year, tossed mud into the faces of five other three-year-olds today to win the thirty-sixth Saranac Handicap at Saratoga.

After just failing to nip Airflame in the American Legion Handicap last Monday, Thanksgiving came back to show a world of speed. He ran the mile in the good time of 1:38 4-5 and finished with eight lengths to spare in the role of the 1 to 2 favorite. Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Encore saved the place by a neck from Mrs. W. S. Kilmer's Lucky Omwen.

With the Wheatley Stable's Storm Scud scratched because of the muddy track, Thanksgiving had little opposition. Piloted by Apprentice Lucas Dupps, he rushed into command after entering the backstretch and increased his advantage at every pole.

An odds-on-favorite also won the five and a half-furlong test for two-year-old fillies when Hauca, stablemate of War Admiral, scampered home for her third straight victory at odds of 7 to 10. The daughter of Wise Counsellor from Samuel D. Riddle's barn has been unbeaten since she finished second in her debut at Belmonth Park in June.

With thunder roaring, lightning zig-zagging the skies and rain pelting down, Mrs. P. S. P. Randolph's Silver Trace won the mile feature of the 3-year-olds at Rockingham Park.

The bay filly, starting in her first claiming race of the year, took the lead at the start and splashed through the mud to score by five lengths at the long odds of $19.62 for 2.

Wise Barrister, 3-year-old son of Wise Counselor, from the Blue Ridge Farm, won his second straight race and his third in five starts at Arlington Park, when he accounted for the 7-furlong feature.

Jockey T. P. Martin guided Wise Barrister over the distance in 1:28 2-5, to gain a neck decision over Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' C. Note. J. W. Parrish's Knee Deep was third in the five-horse field. The winner paid $4.20 as the favorite.

Smith Signs With 'Skins

Star Quarterback Ends Holdout After Parley.

Riley Smith, for two seasons one of the better quarterbacks in the National Football League, yesterday ended his holdout by signing a 1938 contract after a conference with Coach Ray Flaherty and Owner George P. Marshall. Smith and the Redskin bosses were closeted for more than an hour before each of the three parties emerged smiling.

Smith, who was largely responsible for the Redskin's drive to the world championship, had been one of the louder squawkers for a pay raise this season.

Riley, he of the educated toe, is the thirty-fifth Redskin to agree to terms. It was Riley's superb blocking and deftness at kicking field goals and extra points that made him almost indispensable. He played practically every minute of every ball game last year.

An all-around player, Smith first came into prominence as a star at the University of Alabama. He played one year in Boston before coming to Washington when the franchise was transferred last year.

He will be making his second appearance in the College All-Star game in Chicago, August 31. Two years ago he captained and quarterbacked the College All-Stars in the big game.

Meet 'Judge' Connie Mack

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Connie Mack, veteran manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, went to bat for a couple of former baseball men as he sat on the bench in Detroit with his friend, Judge John P. Scallen. They were given suspended sentences as Mack interceded for them.

War Admiral Races Today At Saratoga

ADMIRAL IS 4 TO 5.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 29 (AP).—Following is the line-up for the $7,500 added, mile and a quarter Saratoga Handicap to be decided here tomorrow:

Horse and Jockey.	Wt.	Odds.
†Fighting Fox (Stout)	106	10-1
Unfailing (Pascuma)	110	6-1
Esposa (Wall)	116	4-1
War Admiral (Kurtsinger)	130	4-5
Burning Star (Lewis)	112	10-1
Regal Lily (no boy)	108	20-1
Flying Scot (Gilbert)	110	30-1
†Isolater (no boy)	104	10-1

†Belair Stud entry.
(Estimated value, $10,500.)

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 29 (AP).—War Admiral, victorious in the Wilson mile Wednesday, comes back tomorrow in quest of the $7,500 Saratoga Handicap, feature of a program that also will match 18 high-ranking juveniles in the thirty-sixth United States Hotel Stakes and five jumpers in the $2,500 Shillelah Steeplechase.

The Admiral has been asked to pick up 130 pounds, four more than he packed in the Wilson, and oppose seven rivals over a mile and a quarter. However, Samuel D. Riddle's 4-year-old won so easily Wednesday, it is difficult to envision anything but victory for the horse that has won 12 of his last 13 starts.

William Woodward's Fighting Fox and William Ziegler, jr.'s Esposa, which completed the field in the Wilson, again will attempt to match the Admiral's speed. The Fox, second by six lengths after running out at the first turn, gets in with the lightweight of 106 pounds, while Esposa, assigned 116, should find the added distance more to her liking.

Completing the field are John Hay Whitney's Flying Scot, Parker Corning's Unfailing, the Shandon Farm's Burning Star, Walter M. Jeffords' Regal Lily and Isolator, stablemate of Fighting Fox.

The United States Hotel Stakes, a dash of six furlongs, is listed only as a $1,500 added event, but will be worth close to $10,000 if as many as 15 face the barrier. Heading the field are George D. Widener's Eight Thirty, winner of the Flash Stakes last Monday; William Ziegler, jr.'s El Chico, the entry of the Wheatley Stable's Gilded Knight and Woodward's Johnstown and Sea Captain and Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Heel In.

Four-Horse Entry In Rich Arlington

Chicago, July 29 (AP).—Mrs. Ethel V. Mars, famed for sending crack 2-year-olds to the races, will shoot the works tomorrow in her bid for a third straight triumph in the $50,000 Arlington Futurity, the West's richest juvenile event.

Mrs. Mars, whose Milky Way Farm Stable won the futurity in 1936 with Case Ace, and shared honors last year when Tiger finished in a dead heat with the Valdina Farm's Teddy's Comet, broke all Arlington precedent today by naming four of her expensive colts for the big northside track's closing feature. Carrying her colors will be Up the Creek, On Location, Time Please and No Competition.

Two other women, mother and daughter, are expected to send out the main threats to the Milky Way Farm quartet. Mrs. Helen Hay Whitney has named Thingamabob which will run as an entry with Equilibrium, a fleet son of Equipoise entered by her daughter, Mrs. Charles A. Payson.

The eastern pair and the Milky Way entry are expected to go to the post equal favorites in the six-furlong test.

Third in line in the betting was the Woolford Farm entry of Unerring and Technician. The former is a full sister to Lawrin, winner of the Kentucky Derby.

Eddie Arcaro, who guided Lawrin to victory in the Kentucky Derby, will pilot Thingamabob. Jack Westrope will ride Equilibrium. Alfred Robertson will have the leg up on Up the Creek, while George Woolf will be up on Time Please, and Lester Balaski on No Competition.

The futurity, with the $5,000 Arlington Handicap, closes the successful 30-day meeting at the spacious non-profit Arlington plant.

Teufel Heads Field In Rockingham Race

Salem, N. H., July 29 (AP).—Teufel, Ogden Phipps' 5-year-old, heads a list of seven entrants in the $5,000 added Rockingham Park Handicap at 1⅛ miles, tomorrow's concluding feature of an 18-day meeting at Rockingham Park track.

Tommy Malley has been imported from Saratoga to ride the Phipps color bearer, which will carry top weight of 122 pounds.

Teufel's chief danger probably will come from the mud-running Challephen, winner of last week's Granite State Handicap on a sloppy track. Challephen will carry 113 pounds as he makes his bid to become the second horse in six years of racing in New Hampshire to win both the Granite and Rockingham.

Both Teufel and Challephen will find a strong field facing them on a probably muddy track, for the entry list bears such stars as:

R. A. Moore's Piccolo, winner of the McLennan Memorial Handicap in Florida; Mrs. V. Wyse's Eastport, a consistent New England winner; Mrs. A. R. Smith's Trouper, which raced to a brilliant victory in the Brookfield Handicap last Wednesday; A. C. Compton's Gerald, third in the Granite State, and Mrs. J. V. Stewart's First Alarm, which probably will find the distance to his liking.

Jaffe Nine Triumphs.

The Jaffe Decorators defeated the Goodwill Boys Club, 8-2, yesterday. A five-run attack in the seventh frame was enough to clinch victory.

Fifth Copper Raise in July

New York, July 29 (AP).—The price of domestic copper was raised another ⅛ of a cent a pound to 10⅛ cents today, the fifth increase in the metal thus far in July. Today's boost brought the price to the highest level since January 28, when it was lowered from 10¼ to 10 cents, a quotation which was maintained until May 19, when it was lowered to 9 cents.

From the 9-cent level copper began its steady creep upward, advancing to 9¼ cents on June 30 and to 9½ cents a day later. On July 5 it was boosted another ¼ cent to 9¾ and on the 22nd it was marked up ⅛ of a cent to 9⅞. The 10-cent quotation, the last prior to today's, was posted on July 25.

As on previous occasions recently, the markup in the domestic price was preceded by higher foreign markets, copper selling abroad today as high as 10.27½ cents, under brisk demand.

Air Express Shipments.

New York, July 29.—Air express shipments on a Nation-wide scale for the first six months of 1938 increased 2.88 per cent over the corresponding period of 1937, Railway Express Agency announced today. The total of the six-month period of this year was 320,776 shipments compared with 311,814 a year ago.

Nation's Trade Begins to Show Upward Trend

New York, July 29.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"The volume of trade for the Nation as a whole is showing a definitely encouraging trend. The gains, to be sure, have been generally moderate, but the mere fact that the downward trend has been broken in numerous lines is a highly favorable development.

"To cite specific examples, the seasonally adjusted index of dollar department store sales for June turned upward for the first time this year. The gain in rural retail sales during June carried this index to the highest level for 1938 to date. Variety store sales also showed a worthwhile advance as compared with May.

"Detailed figures on wholesale trade for June are not yet available, but evidence of improvement has appeared in many lines. Wholesale buying of textiles showed sharp gains over the low spring levels, orders for shoes increased, and distributors of building materials have reported substantial sales gains.

"These various reports on trade volumes are confirmed by the action of bank debits, which showed a considerably better than seasonal increase in June. The index of bank debits for the month was 96, compared with 112 a year earlier, a decline of 14.3 per cent. The year-to-year decline in May was 16.8 per cent; in April, 16.2 per cent, and in March, 19.2 per cent.

"For July, all available statistics point to a continuation of these favorable trends. The decline in bank debits has now narrowed to only 8 per cent, and reports for 266 cities on department store sales show that these are running only about 8 per cent below year earlier levels.

"These shrinking declines would lose significance if the comparisons with 1937 were with a lower base, but this is not true. The fact is that both bank debits and department store sales in July last year were about the same as in June. Thus, the inference is that current trade volumes are actually enlarging and that the decline has been at least temporarily reversed."

U. S. Free Gold Total Only $184,044,127

The Treasury reported yesterday that only $184,044,127 of its record $13,000,000,000 gold asset total, was in free gold. Of the total, $10,711,330,639 is in gold certificates, or gold certificate credits. Another $1,800,000,000 is in the Treasury's stabilization fund. The department has $156,039,430 as a reserve against more than $347,000,000 of United States and Treasury notes.

An increment resulting from reducing the weight of the gold dollar accounts for $141,920,401, which may be used for various purposes such as redemption of bank notes. Another $8,936,329 is in a 5 per cent redemption fund for Federal reserve notes.

Selling Takes Edge Off Advance but Trading Volume Is Curtailed.

New York, July 29.—Security markets here made a firm start but faltered around mid-session and closed moderately lower with dealings throughout at a leisurely pace. Speculative bonds followed the downturn in shares. Sterling and guilders sank to new lows in the foreign exchange section. Wheat dropped to the lowest levels since 1933 but rallied to record fractional gains. Cotton backed and filled, ending 2 points lower to 3 higher.

Persistent selling was reported by a large number of the brokerage houses, but those in a position to know described such liquidation as mostly from odd-lot owners and weak accounts. It is noted that the little fellows in the stock market have sold more on balance than they have bought which, superficially, appears to refute the theory that public participation has been large during the advance of securities to date. The really substantial traders, Wall Street appears to believe, remain on the long side and are active as buyers on any substantial reaction. Some observers say that the more conservative trading element will seek confirmation of predictions for a substantial bulge in business this fall before extending their purchases. General agreement exists, however, as to probability of improvement barring unforseen developments.

Richfield Oil.

Richfield Oil sprang into prominence in stock exchange dealings today, leading the list of active stocks with a half point gain. On Thursday the company announced a deal with Union Pacific under which it acquires a large crude oil supply and, in turn, supplies the carrier's Western fuel oil requirements. A merger rumor which has been going the rounds may, however, have contributed as much to the demand for the shares as news of the deal with Union Pacific. It is said that Richfield is negotiating for the Hancock oil interests, a story which so far lacks official confirmatior.

Motor shares were among the most busily traded for the session, Hupp and Studebaker making a little progress on the upside while Chrysler dropped a couple of points and General Motors sold off ⅝. It is recognized that a resumption of large scale output and sales by the motor car makers will be vital to business recovery now being sought, just as the automotive industry led the upswing in 1935, 1936 and in the early part of last year. There are indications that manufacturers would prefer to see further substantial reductions in new and used car stocks before deciding on 1939 production programs. The only certainty, apparently, is that next year's cars will represent better value for the price than ever before.

Copper shares failed to pick up on announcement that domestic producers had moved refined copper prices up another notch, and trade reports that both domestic and export business this week has been satisfactory. Steels weakened, perhaps because of the appraisal of prospects for the industry by E. G. Grace, president of Bethlehem, given out after the close Thursday. He said improvement so far has been slight, that no large new business is in sight, and that steel makers must be resigned to lose money at current price levels for products, costs of labor and materials and subnormal operations.

Volume on the stock exchange totaled 1,204,240 shares with 15 issues contributing nearly 28 per cent, or 337,000 shares of the total. Of 823 issues traded, 386 declined and 264 advanced, 173 being unchanged.

Bond Market Narrow.

Uncertain conditions prevailed in the listed bond market today, partly in reflection of the equity irregularity. Highest grade issues were all but motionless, with week-end holiday influences evident in the small volume of trading. The more speculative issues showed more gains than losses, with the active rails tending to lose ground. Foreign dollar bonds improved. Turnover in all issues was $6,400,000.

Local traction bonds were prominent in the corporate section, owing to further moves toward inserting unification provisions in the new State constitution. Intrborough, B. M. T. and Manhattan Railway bonds all moved up. There were many small gains among the cheaper interest-paying railroad bonds, but the representative issues of the New York Central, Nickel Plate and similar roads declined. Amusement, communications, holding company and other special groups were dull.

United States treasury securities showed only small gains and losses, on light trading. The guaranteed issues of the Farm and Home corporations likewise were dull, as the institutional buyers of such issues held aloof. Telephone bonds and best power and light issues advanced fractionally. U. S. Steel debentures gained a small fraction and closed at the high. Leading carrier bonds also were in demand.

Latin-American default bonds were in demand among foreign issues, with Colombians leading the way in the hope that the administration soon to take power will remedy the default. Japanese and Italian bonds were dull, and best Europeans firm.

Wheat Rallies After Slump To New Lows

Unfavorable Crop Reports From Canada Help to Lift Prices.

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 29.—Brisk concentrated buying rallied Chicago wheat values to fractional gains at the last today after a cent decline to low levels unmatched before since 1933.

Persistent selling early, attributed to sources Southwest and presumed to be hedging against new crop movement, was largely responsible for the transient setback. Houses with export connections led late buying of futures.

Contributing impetus to the rally were disquieting crop advices from Canada. Serious deterioration there from early season prospects was ascribed to rust, grasshoppers and drought.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅛@⅜ higher compared with yesterday's finish, September, 68⅛@68¼; December, 70⅛@70¼; corn unchanged to ⅜ lower; September, 57@57⅛; December, 54⅜@54½; oats unchanged to ⅛ up; rye unchanged to ½ down, and provisions varying from 12 cents drop to a bulge of 2 cents.

SEC June Filings Nine Months' Top

The Securities and Exchange Commission said yesterday that effective registrations of approximately $270,000,000 during June were the largest since August, 1937. Effective registrations for the half year were approximately $750,000,000, amounting to 35 per cent of the total for the first half of 1937 and 30 per cent of the total for the first half of 1936. They were, however, 21 per cent higher than the registrations durin gthe first half of 1935.

While the registrations during the first half of the year covered the entire field of industry, the bulk of their dollar value was accounted for by a handful of large blocks of in-which only a fraction has been sold during the period) and by a few large manufacturing company issues.

In the case of the issues registered during the first half of 1938, about 40 per cent of the estimated net proceeds was intended for repayment of indebtedness, about 27 per cent was to be used for plant and equipment expenditures, another 20 per cent was to go for purchase of securities for investment, and about 6 per cent was to be used for additional working capital.

9 Owls Too Much For Alexandrians; Police Aid Sought

Two families of owls have proved too much for Alexandrians who live in the First Ward. They appealed to police yesterday to do away with the birds who have nested in the belfries of two churches.

Police were asked to station marksmen at vantage points and bring down nine owls whose nocturnal comments are playing havoc with sleep in the neighborhood. The birds are in historic Presbyterian Meeting House and St. Mary's Catholic Church.

Hughes Welcomed Noisily in Chicago

Chicago, July 29 (AP).—Chicago's welcome to Howard Hughes and his round-the-world flying crew was so boisterous today the crowd got out of control at the municipal airport and kept the fliers in their plane for 15 minutes.

The ship in which the flier and his four companions encircled the globe landed at the airport at 11:56 a. m. (C.S.T.), 12:56 a. m. (E.S.T.).

Hughes and his crew were given an uproarous trip through Chicago's loop, escorted by a band and a detachment of mounted police, and showered with ticker-tape and paper. He said he intended to leave "very early" tomorrow for a day's stay in Houston, Tex., and then fly to Los Angeles for 10 days.

Army Plane Spans U. S. in 10 Hours

New York, July 29 (AP).—Army officials today closely guarded details of an unheralded flight from San Francisco to Mitchel Field, Long Island, in which a Seversky P-35 pursuit plane is believed to have set a new Army record for the coast-to-coast hop.

The plane, piloted by Lieut. H. L. Neely, took off from San Francisco at 9 a. m., E. S. T., yesterday and arrived at Mitchel Field at 7:05 p. m. E. S. T.

Allowing for three refueling stops at Salt Lake City, Omaha and Cleveland, the plane's actual flying time was 9 hours, 55 minutes.

New Parking Ban Designed to Aid Driver's Vision

The District's establishment of a 20-foot-from-building-line parking limit was described yesterday as "an arbitrary short cut" to adequate sight clearance at intersections by the American Automobile Association.

"The paint-saving policy adopted by the District in designating the new parking limits with three small yellow lines has proved costly to hundreds of unwary motorists this week," the association declared. Most of motorists failed to see the lines or hadn't "the faintest idea" of what they meant, it was said.

Mayor Calls Council Session At Alexandria

Special Meeting Arranged for Discussion of PWA Projects.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Temple 1767

Mayor Richard L. Ruffner has called a special meeting of city council for Monday night at 7:30 o'clock to consider a number of PWA matters and also items that have accumulated since the July 12 meeting, when council adjourned for the summer.

Following the open meeting, council will hold an executive session for further consideration of the applicants for the position of city manager.

James Wallace, colored, 19, made the fatal error of leaving his coat, with his employment card giving name, age and other data in the yard of the colored Elks' Home in the 200 block of North Henry street, when he broke into the club and robbed it early Thursday morning.

Police caught up with him and yesterday morning at headquarters he confessed getting $2 from a vending machine at the Elks, $4 from two music boxes and a cigarette machine at the store of W. H. Baton, 1023 Madison street, also snatching the purses of Mrs. C. W. Tyler, of Groveton, and Mrs. J. L. Perry, of 323 South Washington street.

Wallace was released last month from the State reform school, where he was sent in 1934 for purse snatching.

The religious summer school of St. Rita's Catholic Church closed yesterday and the 128 children attending there were entertained in the church hall by the Rev. Peter A. Shouten, administrator of St. Rita's Parish, and Mother Clotildie, Sisters Mary Ambrosia, Aloysia Marie and St. Agnes, of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, West Falls Church.

A class of 32 children of this parish will receive their first Holy Communion at the 7 o'clock mass tomorrow morning in St. Rita's Church.

Francis H. Fannon will speak today between 9 and 9:30 a. m. over Station WJSV in the interest of a campaign to be launched by local merchants and sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and Retail Merchants Association, on the slogan, "Sales Mean Jobs."

52,500 Eggs Are Upset And Cooked on Highway

Baton Rouge, La., July 29 (AP).—A truck driver suddenly found himself in the middle of a huge omelet on the highway near here today. His truck was crowded off the road spilling 150 cases each containing 350 eggs. All 52,500 eggs were ruined. They cooked thoroughly on the steaming concrete highway.

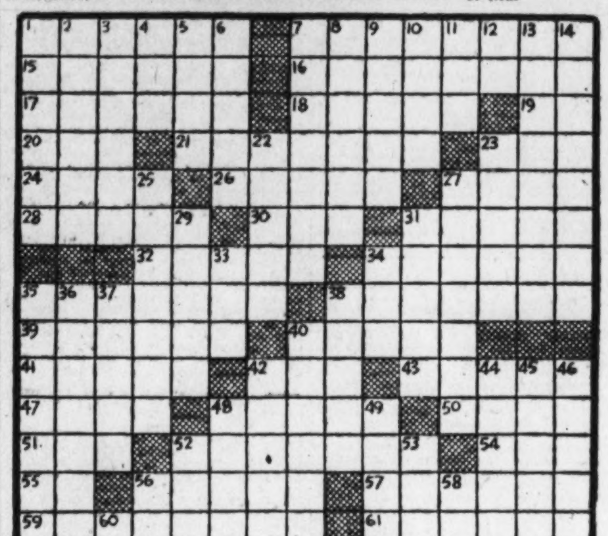
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.



Blame for Muzzle On TVA Workers Laid to Committee

Knoxville, Tenn., July 29 (AP).—John B. Blandford, jr., TVA general manager, shifted upon a Congressional investigation committee today the responsibility for a "gag" order prohibiting TVA employes from talking with Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, ousted chairman of the agency.

Dr. Morgan said last week TVA employes told him their superiors ordered them not to talk to him without clearing through "proper administrative channels."

Blandford testified the committee failed to set up any procedure by which Dr. Morgan could interview TVA personnel.

He accused the deposed chairman of "suspicion, unfriendliness, aloofness, and later, active opposition" in efforts to build up the Authority's administrative organization.

Death Plot Is Told By Doomed Man

Waycross, Ga., July 29 (AP).—Harvey Nelson testified today he and two pretty waitresses carried out a plot to shoot his 12-year-old son J. C. Nelson, for $900 insurance after discarding a plan to drown the boy "because he was a good swimmer."

Nelson, roadhouse operator under death sentence for the slaying, was a witness against Verna Mae Fowler today. Admitting he had told four or five "different stories" of the boy's death, Nelson swore the Fowler girl fired the shot.

She and Mary Kent, both employees at Nelson's establishment, were indicted.

Rezoning Pleas To Be Weighed For Arlington

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Clarendon, Va.. Tel OXford 0509.

Despite the recent action of the zoning appeal board in postponing vote on a large number of applications for rezoning to permit row-house construction, indications are that the county board at its meeting today will consider a number of such applications.

The county in the past has always awaited action of the zoning appeal board, but, as expressed by one member of the county board yesterday, it is holding up construction which he said was in excess of $6,000,000. He added he did not consider it right, and if the board can act, consideration of applications will be given at today's meeting.

Among other matters to come to the board's attention will be the report of County Engineer C. L. Kinnier on survey for the proposed development of Fairfax drive from Courthouseroad, where it meets Lee boulevard, to Clarendon.

AidReaches Island, Air Amateur Hears

New York, July 29 (AP).—Mrs. Dorothy D. Hall, amateur radio operator, said today the operator at Pitcairn Island, in the South Pacific, told her a steamship had landed and left 12 bags of flour.

It was the first ship to stop there since false rumors of a typhoid epidemic on the island were started nine weeks ago. The island's operator, Andrew Young, in previous short-wave conversations with the New York housewife, had expressed fear of a shortage in food and medical supplies.

U. S. Civil Service Searching in Vain For a Loftsman

If you are a loftsman and desirous of plying your profession, the United States Civil Service Commission would like to make your acquaintance.

They have been after a first-rate loftsman or two for more than a month and are still looking around. The commission wants to fill a loftsman's place at the Charleston, S. C., Navy Yard and a preliminary search in that area was unproductive. Now they are looking around up here—and anywhere else that a competent loftsman may be.

"Qualified persons are urged to apply," says the commission, extending the closing date on applications to August 18. Incidentally, a loftsman is one who lays out by geometric construction and development for steel ships the lines of the ship, full size, on the floor or scrive board from tables and drawings furnished by the drafting office.

The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime

Bob Burns Says—

There are two great forces that no one has ever been able to describe, electricity and love. Every writer who has tried to define love has contradicted every other writer.

One of the finest woman writers out here said, "I know what love is because I love my husband . . . love is absolutely unselfish."

Not long ago, while her husband was in New York, I met her on the street and she was all smiles. She said, "I just got a letter from my husband and he says he's miserable away from me and I'm the happiest woman in the world."

Only Roosevelt Action to Halt Subway Plan

D. C. Report to President Backs Underpass at Thomas Circle.

Only a direct request from President Roosevelt can halt or modify the projected subway under Thomas Circle, it was learned yesterday, as a combined report recommending the project was being prepared by the District Commissioners, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Fine Arts Commission.

The Commissioners are prepared to go ahead on the underpass plan, and believe that when completed it will add to, rather than detract from, the beauty of the city, as well as alleviate traffic congestion.

New full grown trees will be planted along Massachusetts avenue to replace those that are to be uprooted during the widening of the thoroughfare, it was said. Other treatments will aim to improve the outward appearance of the subway.

The Thomas circle subway is being held up only until a formal report can be made to the President.

Change Park Name.

Meanwhile the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday voted to change the name of Takoma Recreation Center to Coolidge Recreation Center.

The big play area, with its swimming pool, tennis courts, baseball diamonds and other recreational facilities, has been developed since 1933 with work-relief funds.

The roadway connecting Blair Portal, at Sixteenth street and the District line, and Rock Creek Park was named Blair Parkway. A small unnamed park in Anacostia was named Alger, for the woman who donated the land, according to Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the planning body.

Chevy Chase Recreation Center becomes Lafayette Recreation Center, Columbia Heights Recreation Center is changed to Powell, Southeast Recreation Center becomes Buchanan, Petworth Playground will henceforth be known as Rudolph, and Kalmia Street Playground will be called Shepherd.

All of these changes were decided upon so that a single name would identify both the playground and the nearest school.

Buys Recreation Land.

Sections G, D and C of Anacostia Park, now become, respectively, Benning Recreation Center, Anacostia Recreation Center and Douglas Recreation Center.

Norman Brown, the commission's land purchasing officer, reported completion of land acquisitions for the proposed recreation area at Fort Barnard Hill, Eastern avenue at Twenty-fourth street northeast. All property also is in hand for the Rose Park playground, adjoining the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway near L street, Settle said.

Settle admitted that Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, appeared before the planning body to plead for transfer of a small piece of idle land, under the commission's control, for use as the site of a northwest health center.

Approval was given plans to transfer a plot of land, 100 by 105 feet, on the McMillan Reservoir reservation from the War Department to the District government as the site for a small building to house the central fire alarm system. PWA Administrator Ickes this week announced an allotment for the construction project.

The planning commission directed its staff to continue co-operation with the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission on acquisition of park lands in Prince Georges County for extension of the Greater Washington system.

John Nolen, jr., was named as the commission's representative on the advisory committee to the Zoning Commission, also as its member of the Board of Zoning Appeals.

Swimmer Saved By Companion

An 18-year-old youth was saved from drowning in the Washington Channel yesterday when his companion dived in and pulled him ashore after he screamed and sank.

The rescued youth, Clyde McClelland, 911 F street southwest, was swimming about 100 feet from shore when he became exhausted. He was pulled from the water by Raymond Harris, 19, 343 M street southwest. McClelland was taken to Providence Hospital after receiving artificial respiration from an unidentified bystander. His condition was described as fair.

Movie Technician Guilty of Forgery

Los Angeles, July 29 (AP).—George D. Smart, $46-a-week sound technician who forged the name of his employer, Louis B. Mayer, pleaded guilty today to charges of forgery and grand theft.

The plea was entered on only two counts, involving $22,500 Smart was charged with obtaining from Attorney Gail Burck. Judge Clement D. Nye set August 11 for hearing on a probation plea and sentencing.

Colored Ministers Protest 'Brutality'

First Infantry Ends Period at Camp Ritchie

Md. National Guard Units Start Home Today; Prizes Awarded.

By Phillip J. Austensen.
A Staff Correspondent.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md., July 29.—Units of the First Infantry, Maryland National Guard, which have completed a two-week training encampment here, will return to home stations tomorrow morning. Eastern Shore units will leave at 6:45 a. m. by train and other units will leave by truck convoy.

Brig. Gen. D. John Markey, assistant adjutant general of Maryland commanding the regiment, today commended the men and officers for their work of the past two weeks. Gen. Markey presented loving cups won by the Service Company of Silver Spring and Company B of Hagerstown.

Capt. Ward W. Caddington received the Service Company cup, awarded for excellence at Federal inspection. The Service Company has won the cup seven out of eight consecutive years and placed second in its off year. Following the presentation, the First Infantry band paraded the Service Company and its cup on the main Company street.

Capt. Carl H. McCleary, who is chief of police of Hagerstown, received the Company B cup awarded for having the highest average for attendance at armory drills. The company has won the cup for the past five years. Its average of 99 per cent is believed a record for the United States.

Cash prizes of $5 each were awarded for the highest scores in shooting as follows: Automatic rifle, score 449 out of 500, Private Donald Kerton, Company B; rifle, score 243, Private Philip Lines, Company I, Salisbury; machine gun, score 360, Private William R. White, Company M, Annapolis.

Regular Army instructors attached to the regiment were greatly pleased with the showing made by the First in the battalion maneuver last night and today. The instructors were impressed by the efficiency in distributing rations under war-time conditions in cover of darkness.

Private Duffy, of Company B, was hero of a saga of the camp when he pedaled a bicycle 4 miles over rough rocky roads to deliver a message which reported the passing by of an unidentified wagon, fired upon by the outpost. Panting, Duffy delivered the message to Maj. Winfield B. Harvard, who, meanwhile, had been informed the station wagon contained not enemy troops but Regular Army instructors and your correspondent making a tour of the positions.

Wife Who Beat Husband Gets 6-Month Term

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., July 29.—This time it was the husband-beater who was sentenced to jail.

"I'm getting tired of being beaten up, and I'm asking you for some protection," Harry Perkins, 59, told Magistrate Emmert R. Bowlus today.

The magistrate gave him the protection. Mrs. Perkins was sentenced to serve six months in the house of correction, but the term was suspended on the provision she stay out of the husband's path. She agreed.

Perkins testified a month ago his wife's weapons were fists, stones and broom handles. "The last trimming she gave me was with a tire lever and a pair of pliers," he said.

Aiken Urges G.O.P. To Aid in Passage Of Beneficial Laws

Portland, Me., July 29 (U.P.).—Gov. Aiken of Vermont tonight advised the Republican Party to strengthen its position by assisting in passage of beneficial legislation.

Addressing the biennial convention of the Young Republicans of Maine, he said:

"Effective opposition by the party out of power is, of necessity, selective, using the tactics of not crying out against everything, but saving our ammunition for those things that really deserve opposition."

Aiken said the Republican Party must admit that it was inactive when deflation was speeding downward at a dizzy pace; that nothing was done to prevent "Wall Street excesses" and subsequent bank panics; that it was unsuccessful in solving the farmers' problems; that "we did not go out of our way to recognize the rights of labor and honestly seek to co-operate with them."

He added:

"I see no return for the party out of power until that party corrects the mistakes that led to its downfall."

Roosevelt's Luck As Angler Fails

Aboard Cruiser Houston, In Galapagos Archipelago, July 29 (AP).—For the first time since reaching Galapagos Islands, President Roosevelt had indifferent luck today in a fishing excursion.

While the cruiser rode at anchor off tiny Seymour Island, a volcanic dot near the center of the archipelago, the Chief Executive spent six hours fishing, but he and two companions had a total catch of but 28 fish.

Scientists from the Houston went ashore to seek pink flamingoes on Seymour Island but found none.

Attempt to Buy Seat in Senate Denied by Taft

President's Son Calls Cost Reasonable; Ohio Campaign Is Bitter.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, July 29.—Robert A. Taft, son of the late President and Chief Justice William Howard Taft, denied vigorously today assertions of his primary opponent, Arthur H. Day, that he sought to "buy" the Republican nomination for United States Senator in Ohio.

The Taft-Day battle, transformed from a "gentlemen's campaign" into a bitter word exchange, temporarily overshadowed spirited fights for Democratic senatorial and gubernatorial posts at stake in the August 9 primary.

Reports $15,684 Spent.

Judge Day, a member of the Ohio supreme court, declared in a speech at Cleveland that Taft was making "tremendous expenditures . . . in his effort to buy his way into the United States Senate." He added, "the Taft money being circulated is fast becoming a public scandal."

"As to campaign expenditures," Taft said in a statement to the press, "Judge Day's charges are wholly without foundation. . . . He offers no proof of any charge, and has none. Every expenditure has been strictly according to law, and the total amount is reasonable."

Taft informed the United States Senate campaign expenditures committee today that his total expenditures to date were $15,684.

Ohio's "favorite son" candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination two years ago, Taft is making his first active bid for public office since he was a member of the Ohio House of Representatives. In the Republican National Convention of 1936, the Taft-pledged Presidential delegates, by agreement, supported Gov. Alf M. Landon.

Democratic Race Quiet.

Both Judge Day, whose name is prominent in Ohio political circles, and Taft are seeking the senatorial nomination for the first time. It was won six years ago by the late Simeon D. Fess, former Senator and party leader.

The Democratic senatorial race between Senator Bulkley, New Deal supporter who was tacitly indorsed by President Roosevelt, and former Gov. George White has been much quieter. Both have generally avoided personalities and discussed national issues.

Gov. Martin L. Davey has defined the prime issue in the Democratic gubernatorial campaign as John L. Lewis and his Committee for Industrial Organization's indorsement of Charles Sawyer, Davey's primary opponent.

To Davey's charge that Lewis would control the State government if Sawyer were elected, Sawyer has replied that the Governor is "evading the issue." The former lieutenant governor has asserted that a "general house cleaning" was needed in the State government.

Paper Scores Davey.

By the United Press.

The United Mine Workers Journal, official publication of the union which John L. Lewis heads, editorially appealed yesterday to all factions of labor in Ohio to smother Gov. Martin Davey at the polls. It predicted that Davey would not receive a dozen votes if organized labor "does its duty." It denied Davey's statements that he called out the National Guard in the steel strike last year only after Lewis had brought in armed pickets from surrounding States to "create a civil war and to beat and club the steel workers into submission."

"The fact is that the steel workers were winning the strike and the companies were frantic," the editorial said. "They called on their willing tool, Gov. Davey, and he sent the armed soldiers to break the strike for them."

Dies' Committee To Bar Testimony Of Nazis and Reds

Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the special House committee created by the last Congress ostensibly to investigate Nazi, Fascist and Communist activities, announced yesterday that he expects to get his information from American patriotic, civic and labor organizations, including the American Legion and the American Federation of Labor.

"The committee," Chairman Dies said in outlining the procedure for the investigation, to get under way August 11, "is not going to subpena Fritz Kuhn, of the German-American Bund, or Earl Browder, head of the Communist Party. If they want to testify, they can, but only on the committee's terms—bring their membership lists, their correspondence, dues lists and other material."

"We've got enough evidence already without their testimony," he said. "Neither are we going to let a lot of cranks come in and make this a smear session. They are not coming in here and turn this committee to their own ends. They've got to come in with clean hands as far as their intentions in appearing are concerned."

D.C. Lutheran Unit Will Build Church

The Augustana Lutheran Congregation will have a church building, its pastor, the Rev. Dr. Arthur O. Hjelm, announced yesterday. The congregation now worships in the auditorium of an apartment house at 2400 Sixteenth street.

It will be perhaps a year, Dr. Hjelm explained, before construction will begin. The building will become a national shrine for the Augustana Lutheran Church.

'Pan-Pana-Gopo—' Police Radio Man Can Spell, Anyway

New Deal Called Foe of Ambition

Miss Marion E. Martin, assistant chairman of the Republican National Committee, said in a radio address last night that the Roosevelt Administration was destroying all the hopes and ambitions of American parents.

"The women of the country want the wheels of industry to turn in order to make an opportunity for their children," Miss Martin declared. "They know that WPA holds out no promise for a rosy future."

She said women "knew" that factories were closing because vindictive and uncertain tax and labor policies of the Administration had left business with neither the courage nor incentive to take commercial risks.

Strike Over, Plant Closes.

Providence, R. I., July 29 (U.P.).—Indefinite closing of the Rochambeau Worsted Co's Mill, affecting 300 employes, was announced tonight by General Manager Maurice G. Dursin, six hours after 30 women sit-down strikers had evacuated the plant.

Martin, Irked By Delay, Ends Aides' Red Trial

Communist 'Deal' Evidence Will Be Submitted by Affidavit.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Juuly 29.—The United Automobile Workers' executive board, irked at delay in the trial of four suspended vice presidents on charges they conspired with Communists, abruptly adjourned the hearing today for a week.

It adopted revised rules which President Homer Martin said made it "probable that no more witnesses will appear."

Evidence will be submitted by affidavit, the board decided, and oral arguments will be heard when it reconvenes August 6.

"No one yet has discovered a way of cross-examining an affidavit," was the comment of Maurice Sugar, defense counsel, on the new rules.

Even before the board acted Martin had decided to present by affidavit the testimony of a blond woman he said had "received a mysterious telephone call, threatening her if she testified."

The woman appeared at U. A. W. headquarters yesterday, but did not testify. Martin said she was ready to relate details of an alleged "deal" between Richard T. Frankensteen, suspended vice president, and Communist Party leaders, by which control of the C. I. O.-sponsored Labor Nonpartisan League unit in Wayne County (Detroit) would be turned over to Communists. Frankensteen is county chairman of the league.

On trial with Frankensteen are Wyndham Mortimer, Ed Hall and Walter N. Wells. A fifth officer, George F. Addes, former secretary-treasurer, was removed and expelled from membership July 8.

In four and one-half days the board had heard only one scheduled witness, as leaders of the administration and anti-Martin factions engaged in constant dispute behind closely guarded doors of the trial chamber at U. A. W. headquarters.

The 18-member board, sitting as a "jury," adopted a resolution today declaring that "deliberate delay and wilful abuse of the established rules of orderly procedure by the defense cannot longer be tolerated."

It directed that U. A. W. counsel supply a bill of particulars against the suspended officers tomorrow; that Sugar file a complete answer by 4 p. m. Monday, August 1, and that all affidavits and exhibits by both sides be filed by 4 p. m. Wednesday, August 3.
